Shinnecocks Recognized. How About a Casino on Plum Island?

By David Lion and Dan Rattiner

This past Tuesday, as you surely know by now, a federal judge named Thomas Platt granted the Shinnecock Indian Tribe full federal recognition. This has been a long time coming. They first applied for this recognition from the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the mid 1970s and have been waiting all these years, living in poverty and difficult circumstances on their reservation in Shinnecock.

But the recognition did not come from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which for 35 years has said neither yes nor no. It has come about because of a lawsuit filed by the Town of Southampton against the owners of a certain 79-acre waterfront property in Hampton Bays, the owners known as the Shinnecock Indian Nation, to stop them from continuing to build a gambling casino there. An injunction was approved to stop the tribe, but then there was the issue of whether the Indian Tribe was an official entity. They are in the eyes of the State of New York, which long ago granted them their recognition, which, by history and documentation, is quite certain, and so the State took on this lawsuit, the Indians requested that it be transferred to a Federal court, and the matter was moved over to Judge Platt. Was the Shinnecock Indian Tribe a defendant? If so, they were a legal tribe, and he had the right to pronounce them as such. And so he did on Monday. He did not make further rulings about the lawsuit, just that the defendant was a legal entity.

There are rules and regulations for when a tribe gets recognized in this way. There are also two other ways they can be Federally recognized. One is by the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the other is by an act of Congress. When a on for years.

Meanwhile, the tribe, which wants a casino site and which has sued Southampton Town for several billion dollars claiming that about 6,000 acres of land, including the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, the National Golf Links and Southampton College were stolen from them by the white men, are in a celebratory and hopeful mood.

"This news shows we are who we say we are," said tribal member Roberta Hunter, who is also an attorney. "I don't think there is any intention on our part to disrupt anyone's life."

"This is a good day today," said former chairman of the Shinnecock Board Lance Gumbs. "I hope now government officials will take the time to sit down and talk. This could be a win-win for everybody."

For it to be a win-win situation, any gambling casino the Shinnecocks might be entitled to build should be somewhere other than in Hampton Bays because of the horrendous traffic and quality of life problems that this would make for this community. It is interesting that the Shinnecocks, when proposing a casino, did not consider building it on their 600-acre reservation, but instead started clearing the land to judge in a lawsuit declares them legal, the third way, they are indeed legal, but there is a gap in the wording that does not make it clear that they could apply for health and education benefits or for casino gambling benefits that would apply if they were approved by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

People predict there is a long slog ahead to resolve all the legal matters in this. It could go

East Hampton's Martha Stewart made an interesting revelation in the most recent issue of Fortune Magazine. She apparently believed that her version of the "Apprentice" would replace Donald Trump's, and that she would be saying "You're fired!" to Trump on an episode of her show. Of course, Trump's "Apprentice" continues to triumph, while Stewart's has been struggling in the ratings from the get-go.

Tom Wolfe will appear as himself in an upcoming episode of "The Simpsons." The author is honored, saying that "The Simpsons" is the only television show he watches.

Theatergoers preparing to watch an R-rated movie may want to brace themselves for an R-rated commercial for Howard Stern's new satellite radio show. Sirius Satellite Radio, which will begin broadcasting Stern's show in January, is airing a somewhat raunchy spot featuring the constellation Orion and what sits below his belt, in movie theaters through December. For the move to satellite radio, Stern, who lives in Amagansett, is being paid $500 million over a five-year period.

Alec Baldwin will star in the Roundabout Theater Company's production of Entertaining Mr. Sloane. The dark comedy will begin previews in February, officially open in March and end its limited engagement run in late May.

East Hampton's Carl Icahn stole the show last week with his comedy routine at Caroline's on Broadway as part of the annual New York Comedy Festival. Icahn, along with several other high powered business executives performed in the sold-out sixth "Funny Business" show created and hosted by David Moore, CEO of register.com.

Junior Hamptonite Stella Keitel, daughter of Lorraine Bracco and Harvey Keitel, has just signed with the Wilhelmina modeling agency, the same agency that repped her mom while she walked the catwalk as a young woman.

Bridgehampton's Kelly Ripa, current co-host of "Live! With Regis....." was recently interviewed by Kathy Lee Gifford, former co-host of "Live! With Regis....." for CBS's "The Insider." Among other interesting revelations, Ripa divulged that her son wishes he could spend more time with his mom and that her husband, Mark Consuelos, once dressed up as Nicole

In an article last week, we inaccurately reported which two of the proposed three beach tax districts were approved. They were Tiana and Hamptons East that were approved. More work is being done to consider a beach tax district for Hamptons West (which includes Water Mill and Bridgehampton.)

Do You Exist?

#2 in our new weekly series.

Not in the minds of the vast majority of your best business prospects you don't. To them, it's as if you had never been born. That's why customers who should be yours are continually paying serious money to your competitors instead of you. And why wouldn't they? You haven't been telling them in unforgettable ads why they should start paying this money to you instead. Why should they? Because you are better. And you must be better to run the kind of ads I will create for you. But don't feel like an idiot. I'm the real idiot, because I'm an advertising expert and you're not. Yet I've been making the same mistake you've been making: Being a legend in my own mind when I should be running these full-page ads in Dan's Papers every week to make sure I become a legend in my prospective advertisers minds. You are familiar with all my ad campaigns; you just didn't know that I created them. (Those wonderful full-page ads for Mark Anthony Rugs that keep them jammed with new customers are a good example.)

You've heard of Prudential Real Estate in the Hamptons? Well, no one had before I wrote the advertising that introduced them. Listen to Real Estate Genius Dottie Herman, CEO of what is now Prudential Douglas Elliman: "I Love Larry Brown. Larry's Ads for us put Prudential Realty on the map in the Hamptons and I swear he did it OVERNIGHT. Larry's Ads gave us such a cool image instantly, we entered the toughest real estate market on Earth, and we opened 7 new Hamptons Prudential offices in 14 months. Larry can make you feel like you're jumping off a cliff, but I'll love him forever. And when people scoffed at the idea of "Long Island Prudential" making it big in Larry's former stomping ground – Manhattan – he proved to me we could succeed there. He is a True Believer and a real friend."

Dottie recently bought the chic-est triple-mint, white-glove, real estate firm in Manhattan – Douglas Elliman – for $78 million. What was our original campaign for Dottie? 12 Double - Page spreads for 12 weeks in a row in Dan's Papers exclusively. Each ad with the same outrageous headline: "IT'S LONELY AT THE TOP. BUT WE'VE HAD LOTS OF TIME TO GET USED TO IT." (It wasn't just our ads that shook up Hamptons real estate for Prudential. Dottie really is a Real Estate genius. She personally chose every one of her 2,500 superstar agents, after a three hour interview. This Lady knows what she is doing.)

Call me, Larry Brown @ 631-764-6747, and I'll show you my work for Gosman's Dock, Bellringer Security, The Art of Eating Catering, the awesome "Round Swamp Farm" and many others. (when Round Swamp started their farm on 3 Mile Harbor George Washington was 17 years old.) As you know, retailers do 25% of their annual cash revenue between now and Christmas Day. So let's have coffee and I'll show you some ads for your business that you will love.

And your competition will hate.

build it five miles to the west, in Hampton Bays. Why not farther afield? We have an idea. And it comes under the heading of killing two birds with one stone. And Lance Gumbs liked it. "Hampton Bays is not our first choice," he told me.

At the present time, there is discussion about the future of an 840-acre island off the coast of Orient Point on the North Fork. At the present time, this entire island is the site of the Animal Disease Research Laboratory. It's been there since 1948. And it is in need of either an overhaul, a modernization, or, as many think, a decision to get them the hell out of there. It's been a big help in finding ways to combat animal disease. But perhaps it is time for it to move elsewhere — perhaps to a more remote area, such as in the middle of Nevada. There is toxic stuff here after all. And the real estate brokers tell us that this island is, without the disease research center (and after a cleanup), worth over $200 million.

But one problem with shutting the facility down is — where would the lab workers, mostly people on the North Fork who commute by government ferry from Orient, go for jobs? I think you know where this is going. Jobs? Have the Federal Government, which by recognizing the Shinnecocks, has made this all happen, give Plum Island to the Shinnecock Indians. We could turn Plum Island into one giant Indian Casino! It would be a land settlement of the lawsuit. And an acknowledgement of the Shinnecocks Right to Exist.

And this could be the premier casino in the world. It would be better than Foxwoods because of its exclusiveness. The traffic problem caused by a casino in the Hamptons would be eliminated, and you could also eliminate any traffic problem on the North Fork, by making use of the Northville Oil Tank Facility Dock, just north of Riverhead on Long Island Sound, and have the only major Long Island Access to Shinnecock Plum Island be by a forty minute boat ride from there. Huge ferries could carry hundreds of people to and from the island. From the north, gamblers could leave from New London and the ferry ports there. Smaller VIP ferries could leave from Orient Point, and you could put a heavy tax on these ferries to generate money for the North Fork, but honestly, most people from the west would just as soon start the party early by getting on board the cruise ships at Northville.

At Shinnecock Plum Island, you could have a pavilion that runs all around the island so that vacationers could walk along a boardwalk, go for a swim, or relax on the beach. You could also host boxing matches at the casino and Shinnecock Plum Island would rival Las Vegas and Atlantic City for that industry. You could put in nightclubs for the night crowd as well giant fountains and hotels all over the place. It would be an Indian Casino owner's dream come true. Southampton regulations would not be compromised.

Southold, on the other hand, would welcome this activity on its currently mis-used Plum Island. The ferry companies (the one at Northville could be run by the family that owns the Hampton Jitney and the Bridgeport-Port Jeff Ferry) could bring jobs and revenue to our community, yet leave it alone and serene at the same time. The whole thing would create lots and lots of jobs. A foot and mouth scientist could make just as much money as a black jack dealer. He'd also have a nicer time. The former scientist could work all night and gamble all day and then head back home on the ferry like they normally do and do it all over again. They would be thrilled!

There really is no downside to turning Plum Island into a casino except for a possible slight increase in traffic on Route 25. The local wineries, restaurants and hotels might welcome the extra business as those VIP visitors wend their way out to Orient and Shinnecock Plum Island.

There could be fireworks displays, Indian dances, major stand-up comedy acts along with live concerts and magic shows. It would be a vacation to remember. What a vacation! Gambling. Rides. Pirate shows. Fake volcanoes going off. One armed bandits. And what happens on Plum Island stays on Plum Island. •

You Dirty Rat (or Raccoon) You're Not Gonna Get Away With This

By Dan Rattiner

Just in case you think that America is fully prepared for any surprise attacks, consider what happened over at the Islip-MacArthur Airport last Tuesday. A small animal, possibly a raccoon or a rat, sneaked in past security during the night, climbed five flights of concrete stairs, got into the control tower and caused enough damage to cause the airport manager, when he came in in the morning, to shut it down. The air traffic controllers, determined not to have to close the whole airport, went to Plan B, an emergency procedure that hasn't been used in 34 years. They walked over to some battery powered backup equipment located for that purpose in the nearby airport firehouse, and for two and a half hours, between 7 and 9:30 a.m., kept track of all the airplanes from there, even though they couldn't see more than half the runways. During that time, maintenance went up to the tower and cleaned up. The animal, whatever it was, was gone.

Specifically, if you really want to know, what the air traffic controllers found when they came to work at 7 a.m. were several overturned garbage cans and trash baskets, papers strewn about, several ketchup packets clawed open and the contents sucked or licked out, and the remains of a leftover half a tuna fish sandwich.

The animal also pooped in three places — on the video screen, the keyboard, and (and this must have been hard to do) on the top of the air traffic microphone.

Evidence seems to be coming in that rats and raccoons are a whole lot smarter than people thought. Researchers have just learned that male rats sing love songs when brought into proximity to female rats. They start in with this behavior when they pick up the scent of a female. Or when they lay eyes on her for the first time. This information is in the current issue of the Public Library Science and Biology Journal, the result of research done by some scientists at Washington University in Spokane.

JUST ONE SECOND AND WE'LL DECIDE WHAT TO DO

By Dan Rattiner

Sometime today, Friday, November 11, a group of scientists in Geneva, Switzerland will make a decision of momentous importance involving what time it is in the world. The scientists comprise a group called the International Telecommunications Union, and it is their job to see if what people think is the time is actually the time.

Many years ago, as you probably know, the time got way out of whack. It was off by not only minutes, but hours and days. It got so bad that the Pope at the time, Pope Gregory, decreed that ten days be eliminated from that particular year, which was 1582. You could look it up in the history books. They aren't there in that year. Thus began the Gregorian Calendar.

If Pope Gregory eliminated the ten days on the advice of his advisors because of some rather primitive information involving crops and the changing of the seasons, today, the advice is far more sophisticated. Unfortunately, for the past thirty years — since the invention of the atomic clock — there is one set of advice coming from a group that notes the time by this atomic method. And there is a totally different bunch of advice coming from a group that notes the time by an older but still remarkably accurate system involving the tilting of the axis of the earth, its circumvention of the sun, and even its wobble.

The problem is, and this is why this decision upcoming this week is so momentous, these two ways of calculating things no longer are matching up the way they are supposed to. And if you calculate it one way, you need to add a second today. While if you calculate it the other way, you do not.

You might say, if you add a second or you don't add a second — what difference does it make? But the fact is that if you add a second,

Before this research, it was known that male rats make some sort of noise when you bring a female in, because you could see his mouth moving. What the noise was, though, was not known. It was up in the high-pitched frequencies, too high for the human ear to hear. The presumption was that it was babble or just excitement. It isn't. It's songs.

"There's a rhythm and pattern to them," said researcher Timothy Holy. "They sound like bird songs. It's clearly courtship. Joy. We didn't expect it."

The sounds meet the three criteria established to call them songs. They have distinct syllables, they have recurring themes, and there is a melodic hook like you find in any catchy tune. Also, though some are repeated, often a whole new tune is created.

Rats have now been added to the short list of creatures where members of one sex sing to the opposite sex to attract them. The list includes porpoises, humpback whales, insects, songbirds and humans. Also, possibly, bats. But we are not quite sure.

*Some enchanted evening.
You may see a stranger
You may see a stranger
— across a crowded room.
And somehow you know...*

About a year ago, a study was made of one of the songs sung by humpback whales that swim in the open waters around the continent of Australia. Whales on one side of the continent, when not singing to females, all sang that one particular song. And whales on the other side of the continent all sang another particular song.

For a long time, scientists thought that these special songs helped individual whales stay near their pod. If they wandered off, they could listen for the special theme song and head for it.

But then, one day, a particular whale they were tracking with a radio monitor swam all the way around to the other side of the continent — a considerable feat — and when he got there and sang his song, the other whales there listened to it and apparently decided they liked it better. So they started singing it and pretty soon all the whales on the other side of the continent were singing it. Now EVERYBODY is singing this song. It's risen to #1 among all the whales surrounding the entire continent of Australia. It's gone platinum.

And then there was the scientific report filed last week by some scientists at the University of Auckland in New Zealand. New Zealand is really, REALLY out of the way, as far as the mainstream of scientific thought is concerned. But they try and keep up and so one day these scientists took a lab rat, a radio collar, ten traps and a wide variety of bait on a boat ride out to a tiny island in the Bay of Islands north of the City. This island is really small, just six acres. Here they would see just how long it would take for the rat to get caught in the trap.

They attached the radio to him. Then they baited five traps, set him free, and took their boat back to the mainland to see how long the rat would last. As I said, this was not a very sophisticated scientific experiment. He lasted a day. He lasted two days. So they motored back out to the island and found the rat foraging among some trees, but ignoring the traps. So they put better stuff in the traps, this time really delicious stuff that the rat would really like. And then again they took the boat back to the mainland.

Another two days went by, and still the rat was going strong. As they motored out again to see what was going on, they found themselves monitoring a strange occurrence. The radio signal was in the water and heading back toward the mainland. As the island is three miles from the mainland, they figured that was the end of the rat. And so they continued out to the island to collect their traps and found, once again, that the traps had not been touched.

About eight hours later, back on shore, they calculated the coordinates of the radio signal at a beach nearby. Driving there in a car, they found the rat, still wearing the radio, munching away on some leaves in the woods. They think this is the farthest that any rat has ever swum, and intend to contact the Guinness Book of World Records.

Question: Will a raccoon, after climbing a Guinness Book of World Records five flights of concrete stairs to get some tuna fish and cat-snip, sing a love song?

Another Question: How far from the mainland of eastern Long Island is Plum Island, home of the Animal Disease Research Center where animals are deliberately made to come down with a disease so they can be studied it?

Answers: We don't know. And three. •

The Further Adventures of "the Most Hated Company in New York"

By Dan Rattiner

And now we present the further adventures of Cablevision, starring founder and Chairman of the Board Charles Dolan and his son James Dolan, the President. As you know, this newspaper has long served as a monitor of the activities of this company, which has consistently shown little interest in either its reputation or its customer base, something that unfortunately might be consistent with a company that for more than twenty years has run as a monopoly on Long Island.

When we last looked in on these two, their firm had just fired off a rocket from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California carrying a big communications satellite high into the sky. Father Charles thought this would be a fine idea. Long Island-based Cablevision could play with the big boys on the national stage. And it could stop the flight of customers to their dreaded competitor, the satellite dish company DirecTV. Son James thought not. As it turned out, James was correct about the rocket. But for a while there, the two were not talking to one another, particularly after father Charles packed the board of directors with his cronies so he could approve the rocket. The stock suffered accordingly.

Other bad news for Cablevision recently included a battle with the New York Mets over showing their ball games on television because the Mets wouldn't pay Cablevision enough. The season ended with the two sides in gridlock, but then two weeks ago, a judge threw out Cablevision's lawsuit and allowed the Mets to form their own sports network to show the games. This does not stop Cablevision from blacking out Mets games for Long Islanders in 2006 if they don't get a high enough fee from the new network. They blacked out Yankee games for Long Islanders in 2002 over a dispute back then.

More bad news included a battle for the

A GREAT WRITER WHO DESERVES BETTER THAN THIS

By R.B. Stuart

A disturbing crime was reported last week. Literary couple Wilfrid Sheed, the well-known author who lives in Sag Harbor, who penned 20 books and has written for such publications as the New Yorker, The New York Times and Esquire, and his wife Miriam Ungerer, a well-respected food and wine columnist and author of four cookbooks, have been hoodwinked out of $60,000 by their caretaker. For nearly a year, their assistant, who was hired to relieve some of the daily burden for the two prize-winning writers, was without conscience, helping himself to their bank accounts.

This whittling away at the rewards from their labors of love has taken its toll on Sheed, aged and with physical disabilities, both financially and psychologically. He says, "It was my fault."

Miriam Ungerer has been the East Hampton Star food columnist for 25 years. During her rich career as a journalist she has written for the New York Times, the New York Post and the New York Journal American. She began her career in Florida as a model and soon was writing copy for a fashion magazine. At 18 she started writing for the St. Petersburg Times, then went on to be the sportswear editor at Women's Wear Daily in New York.

Food wasn't her first love. It was painting, and she thought she'd grow up to be an artist. She also adored the piano but while attending a convent boarding school, harsh piano lessons made the learning process boring, so she preferred studying art. At age 16, she was thrust into cooking by her father, because their household cook quit and Ungerer's stepmother couldn't cook. And since her own mother hadn't either, Miriam was without guidance. She learned how to cook by ferociously reading food books.

"When I was working at WWD, a friend of mine who was also an editor said, 'You can write and you can cook, why don't you write a Oceanfront Homes About to Go. There's Only One Solution.

By Dan Rattiner

As you probably have heard, workmen in Riverhead uncovered the human remains of Native Americans on a bluff near the Indian Island Golf Course last week. The remains have been dated from the "Woodland" period, which is around 10,000 years ago. It is believed that the Native Americans were here on Long Island as long ago as 50,000 years ago.

One thing the Native Americans learned in these 50,000 years was not to build a house down at the beach. They may have done so with disastrous effects at the beginning of their stay here. But they learned. Unfortunately, what we call the "white men" have only been on Long Island for 400 years. So we can be forgiven if we have not learned that lesson yet.

Those that build down by the ocean think that they have now staked their claim oceanfront and so they own the land, and the house (which they do), and the view and the beach (which they don't). It's an expensive business owning all of this. But they've always had their way.

I think they would be better off thinking of their oceanfront homes as sort of an ice cream sundae. It is so good, all that ice cream and hot fudge and whipped cream and a cherry. But before you begin, you know that in the end, there will just be you and the spoon and the dish it came in. You have to move on.

But they don't want to accept that. Before they buy, they are told that the property they have purchased is defined by metes and bounds set out by surveyors. There's a drawing made of the part of the planet that is now owned. If erosion comes and slices off one side of your property and the boundaries are now under water, then you've lost that part. Your measurable property lost ever gets returned.

Except it has.

Fifteen years ago, I got a call from the Mayor of Westhampton Beach. How would I like to go for a boat ride in the Duck? Westhampton Beach, at that time, had a vehicle that could drive on tires along the roads, then go down the sand and into the sea and then motor along just beyond the waves like a boat.

At the time, Westhampton Beach and the Town of Southampton were suffering through one of the worst erosion disasters imaginable. One hundred and eighty beachfront homes had pitched into the sea along Dune Road, west of that town. Indeed, at one place where there used to be houses, there was now a huge, broad inlet, with the sea meeting up with Shinnecock Bay and the salt water washing in and out according to the tide. This inlet was an astonishing half-mile wide at the

I asked if anybody had any of that underwater property up for sale. I meant it as a joke, but a few people did. You could pick up a parcel for $1,500.

becomes slightly smaller as a result of what's been taken. Eventually, you will have to move your house back. Many houses owned by neighbors, as you surely have seen, have been moved back. And some of those who have very small parcels and lose enough of it are just plum out of luck. The house has to fit on the remaining property and within the bounds of zoning, to protect your neighbors. And none of the property you've time I saw it while standing on the Duck offshore. Somewhere, underwater, there were rectangles of land along the sea bottom, which at one time were owned by summer people. Their houses, built with high hopes many years before, were gone, washed away in the tide. Too bad for them. Now it was all an inlet, tentatively named Pike's Inlet.

Standing on the deck of the Duck, I asked Mayor Andon if anybody had any of that underwater property up for sale. I meant it as a joke, but he said that a few people did. You could pick up a parcel for $1,500. Who knew what the future might bring?

The future consisted of the Army Corps of Engineers. Within two years, the Engineers brought in these enormous corrugated steel panels, panels forty feet long and thirty feet high, of the sort you might use to create a Navy drydock area to prepare ships. But they did not make a big box with them. They instead lined them up parallel to the sea right where the dunes used to be, and they attached them to one another and then used pile drivers to bash them through the shallow water of the inlet into the seabottom, and then twenty five feet further down than that. This wall could withstand almost anything. Sand would be piled up in front of it and in back of it. And the peninsula of Dune Road would be restored.

And so it was. You don't see that enormous wall of steel today. It is buried in the ground below the sand, an anchor for the peninsula that got restored above. (It completely closed the new Inlet.) And wouldn't you know — all new houses got built up again on these sites, even bigger than before. A lot in there, if there was one that were to come up for sale, would probably sell for about $2 million.

Now, I am not writing this story today because

I want to advocate the building of an enormous steel underwater wall to stop what is surely a very devastating winter of beach erosion here in the Hamptons. But I am going to advocate something else when I get to the end of this story, and I think you will be surprised by it.

There has been one other example of beach erosion being stopped and reversed here in the Hamptons. And it too is on Dune Road in Westhampton Beach, but to the east of where they built the wall. In fact, this project that stopped beach erosion can rightly be said to have caused the wall.

The second example of beach erosion being reversed is today along the four mile stretch of Dune Road extending from Quogue to the place where the wall starts. In the 1960s, Suffolk County, noting that the sand was eroding in front of the homes along this stretch, began an ambitious project of stone jetties, built at quarter mile intervals, which was supposed to extend seven miles between Quogue and where Dune Road ends at Moriches Bay. Because the sand that washes along the ocean beach arrives at Montauk and sweeps westward toward New York City, as you put in these jetties the sand will get caught up in the jetties the same way they might get caught up in the tines of a comb.

This mighty project was started around 1964. And by 1970, it was half built. Sixteen of the proposed 28 jetties were in place. They had started in the east and were marching them west. They had gotten as far as Westhampton Beach. And then they stopped. By 1975, the young people of this country were in open peaceful rebellion against authority. People marched against Suffolk County and their evil jetties, the cost of which came from the taxpayers.

Personally, I know about five people who have oceanfront homes along this stretch. One is newscaster John Roland and his wife, Joanna. They bought their house cheap, around 1980, when the ocean was right up against the base of the house there. The new jetties were nearby. It was a gamble. Would the jetties help?

Last summer, my girl friend and I had dinner at the Rolands. There is now so much sand out front of their house it is more than the length of a football field to just walk to the edge of the sea. The jetties are practically entirely buried. So much sand has been caught up in those jetties it is a virtual Sahara.

Now it goes without saying that as the sand got caught up in those jetties as it scoured down the beach from east to west, there was none left by the time you got to where the County finally caved in to public pressure and abandoned the project a mile down. Here, finally, after fifteen years of total devastation as the sea washed across the homes and the road, there was Pike's Inlet. And after that, the restoration project courtesy of the Army Corps.

Is there a message here? At the present time, courtesy of global warming, the Arctic and Antarctic Ice Caps are melting and the sea levels are rising. Along the south shore of Long Island, the sea level is already a noticeable half inch higher than it was in 1950.

We have two choices. One cheap and one expensive. We can do nothing, fight over where to put the remaining sand and who should pay for

A Trip

A Civil War, a Newspaper Publisher and George W. Bush

By Dan Rattiner

This may seem hard to believe, but there was a time in the early days when Dan's Papers was just published in the summertime. In the winter, I'd shut down and go to some interesting place in another part of the world for four months. But that was a really long time ago. The paper is now celebrating its forty-fifth year.

I mention this because last month, you may have read about these huge mud slides in Central America. There were ten of them, and many of them took place on the banks of one of the most beautiful lakes in the world, Lake Atitlan in Guatemala. Three of the native Indian villages were completely buried by these mud slides with hundreds of residents still in them. Attempts were made to dig them out, but they proved futile. The mud was fifteen feet deep. It was decided instead to make memorials of these villages. The whole country went into mourning.

I lived in an Indian village on the shores of Lake Atitlan for four months during the winter of 1970-71. My village was Panajachel and at that time you could rent a western style house on a dirt road with orange trees, lawns and a gardener for $75 a month. Given inflation, that was probably about $500 a month in today's money. But for a 30-year-old and his 24-year-old wife, that was quite affordable.

I did wonder if it was our village that was no more. The newspapers named them. One of them was Panaj. Had its name been changed?

As the bad news continued from around the lake, there were more towns mentioned. One of them was Santiago Atitlan, the largest village across the lake. We had taken a day trip to that village when we lived there. We had hired a man named Pedro who had a small outboard and he had taken us to that village and three others — there are dozens of Indian villages around the lake — and I remembered it well. There were no paved roads. Just walking paths. The village had a dock on the lake in the front and a tall volcano at the back. The villagers in all these places wore bright and colorful clothes — jackets and scarves and head-dresses — woven in great patterns. And every village had patterns and colors different one from the other, with Santiago Atitlan proudly having among the most beautiful of them. It was like different professional football teams, from the perspective of the clothing they wore. You could always tell where a villager was from by his clothing, no matter where he was.

Had Santiago Atitlan gone under? What had been lost?

We have a great many Hispanic people living in the Hamptons at this time. As a matter of fact, this Saturday, November 12, there is a beauty pageant scheduled at Southampton High School to select Miss Latina Hamptons. There will be entries from Mexico, Costa Rica, Colombia and, among other places, Guatemala.

I really wanted to find out about the lake. Who did I know from Guatemala? After calling around to friends, I located a man who was not only from Guatemala but was born and raised on the lake. He owns a cleaning business in the Hamptons now. And his name is Jorge Belasquez. I called him up and we talked on the phone.

"Santiago Atitlan is all right," he said. "Two of the three villages that were lost were nearby but under the jurisdiction of that town. The third village was on the other side of the lake, next to Panajachel. Another beach town. Also, unfortunately, the slides came across the winding road leading down to Lake Atitlan from the Pan Am Highway. It also knocked out numerous bridges. It will be several months before all of this is repaired."

Jorge told me he had been conscripted

into the army as a teenager, stayed in the Army for about five years, but then came to the United States and applied for citizenship as a political refugee.

"I came to Guatemala in the fall of 1970," I told him. "We landed at the airport at Guatemala City and found ourselves in the middle of a war. Rebels had surrounded the airport. But the army controlled the terminal, and the main road in and out. They were able to escort us out to downtown in a taxicab."

"We stayed one night in Guatemala City before taking a taxi ride for the three hours down to the lake. The country was under a curfew. In Guatemala City, government officials and rebels were being gunned down on the street. We stayed that first night at the Pensione Reforma, a former estate, on the main avenue in the city where all the embassies are."

"I know the Pensione Reforma," he said.

"That night, at two in the morning, a tremendous explosion outside woke my wife and I from a deep sleep. Then there was the sound of debris raining down on the cobbled roof above our heads. In the morning we learned that someone driving by the Spanish Embassy next door to us had thrown a bomb from a car as he drove by. It had blown off the front porch."

"You were there when they bombed the Spanish Embassy? That was a major event. A woman and her two children were in the embassy at that hour. She was a spy for the rebels and she and her children were killed. It became a rallying point for the rebels. And it is considered a milestone in the history of our country. Did you ever hear of Rigoberta Menchu?"

"No. But I kept a daily diary of the trip," I said. "The account of the event is in my diary. Handwritten, longhand."

"I'd like to see that."

I invited Mr. Belasquez up to my office. And at 12:30 p.m. last Wednesday, he was there. He's a small man, handsome as many Guatemalan men are, and prosperous looking. He wore a sweater that had an emblem on it with the name of his firm, Cleaning of the Hamptons. And when he came in, he looked at his watch. "I can stay for about 45 minutes," he said as I led him upstairs. "I have a business appointment."

So much for the slow pace of life in a Central American country, a long time ago.

I showed him the entries from my Guatemalan diary and we talked about the war. I recalled reading in the New York Times about 1995 that the Civil War had finally ended in Santiago Atitlan. Members of the Guatemalan Army, stationed in a fort outside of that town, had demanded that the Indians bring in a particular native of that town for questioning. Instead, the entire town of Indians had walked single file out to the fort and just sat there on the ground, silently, outside. After a while, a colonel came out with a rifle, laid it down in front of the Indians, and apologized. It was a gesture heard all around the country. The war, after 36 years and

Loose Ends

How SUNY Stony Brook Will Complete the Purchase at Southampton

By Alan Michael Braveman

When Southampton College opened its doors in the fall of 1963 it was hailed as an "Exciting Beginning in East End Education." It was conceived by a group of local businessmen as a small Liberal Arts institution that would serve the East End of Long Island but attract a cross section of students from all over America. These businessmen sought the aid and advice of Long Island University in creating and running the institution.

At the beginning there was unending hope, followed by sometimes eccentric but brilliant students and teachers as well as high flying optimism for more than 40 years. Then there was the announcement in June of 2004 that the "grand experiment failed."

Long Island University announced that the college would be closed and the land sold for the highest and best possible use to "fulfill the fiduciary responsibility of Long Island University's board of trustees."

The politics of Long Island University's interaction with Southampton College had been tempestuous and standoffish since its early days of under-funding and the perceived benign neglect of more than 40 years. Still the "For Sale" announcement came as a surprise to almost everyone.

The strategy formulated by Long Island University after years of running roughshod over Southampton College and LIU's inability to raise any substantial endowment from the alumni and community created the impression, at least in LIU's mind that, 'No one cared.'

They guessed wrong.

The announcement set off a firestorm of criticism and protests that rallied the alumni, fac-general agreement last week and a $35 million acquisition fee was agreed upon.

President Shirley Strum Kenny of Stony Brook described the negotiations as "Collegial. They (LIU) wanted to sell and we (Stony Brook) wanted to buy. So it was not really difficult at all. There are things we must do now to make sure that we can have the doors open for the fall or even some classes as early as this summer. First, we cannot buy the property until we go through all the environmental studies, the title search, the approval of the Comptroller and the Attorney General and do the Due Diligence that we must. But this will take a while. These things always take time. They (LIU) want to continue running their Graduate programs and the radio station, primarily, and we will look at their needs and our needs.

"For the first few years, as we will not be up to our full capacity of 2000 students, we will make agreements on these issues. However, if we are to offer classes this fall or even this summer, we have to have possession of the property as soon as possible, after all the details are worked out. We need to advertise for students early enough to have 600 to 800 students for the fall. Some will obviously be the Marine Science Students that are already there and some will be other students in Marine Science and Environmental Studies Program and others will be students taking Beginning Mathematics and Beginning English who live in the community and are starting out as freshmen.

"The people at Stony Brook are really excited and looking forward to the challenges and the potential of this exciting campus, and Southampton and all of the East End communities have been overwhelmingly generous in their support for this change."

Vic Finalborgo, the owner of Catena's Market in Southampton, said, "The re-opening of the college will be a great boon to the town and the community. We miss the students and the faculty, not just because they came and spent their money buying food or sandwiches, but after 40 years they were an integral part of the community that we need. A lot of the students in the past were the volunteers for different causes and they brought a good positive level of energy to the town and the community. The addition of all those new faces every year, the faculty and their families brought excitement to this town that we do not want to lose."

Robert F.X. Sillerman, former chancellor of Southampton College and entertainment giant said that "The deal between LIU and Stony Brook is 95 to 98 percent done, and while I am sure that there will be pushing and shoving on both sides in the final negotiations, LIU will be scrambling to keep the Graduate programs in place on the campus. It is important that there be an esteemed program that teaches writing as well as graduate education. These are important for the community. But Stony Brook doesn't need LIU for that. They can do it as well or better than LIU and it will be a lesser cost to the students. So I don't see any motivation for Stony Brook to accede to the demands for a long-term lease. It remains to be seen if that will happen."

200,000 dead, was over.

Jorge told me the same story that another Guatemalan had told me a few years earlier about the causes of the war. Government officials from a socialist party, looking to see a Soviet Union type takeover of the government, had seized the Coast Guard Academy in the 1960s. Though they were driven out by the small Guatemalan army, battles continued. And then the CIA, to counter the Soviets, had stepped in, financed, equipped and trained an enlarged government army. The dictator, General Arana, put into effect a curfew, increased the size of his army tenfold, rooted the rebels out of Guatemala City (when I was there) and had driven them into the mountains.

"The whole time I was there," I said, "we all thought it was just one political party fighting another political party. We didn't know the larger picture."

I told Jorge about how we had decided to go to Guatemala. We had been told about Lake Atitlan by Elaine Benson, who owned an art gallery in Bridgehampton at the time. She had gone there the winter before.

"She and her husband loved it. They recommended it. They didn't tell us anything about a war."

We stayed the first few nights at the lake at the same place they did — Rancho Grande — and then at the suggestion of Millie, the American woman from Tennessee who owned the place, rented our house near the beach.

"Rancho Grande is still there," he said.

"It is? How do you know?"

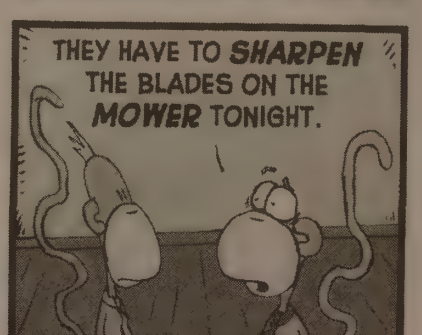

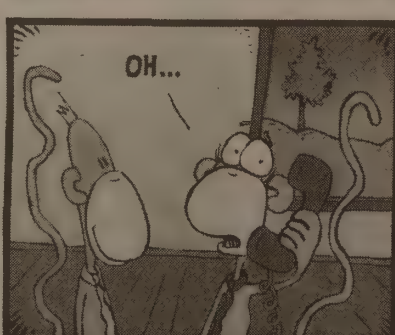

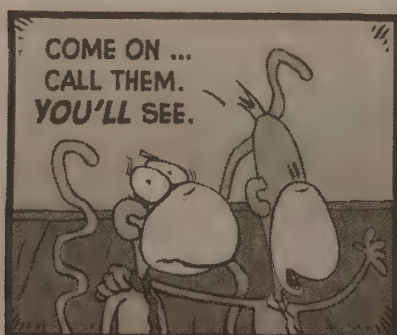

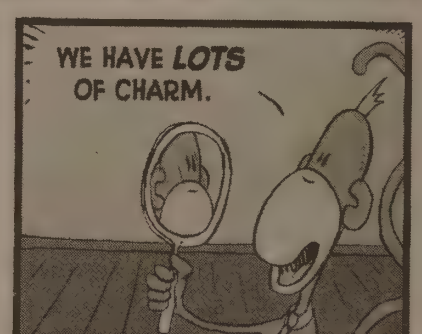

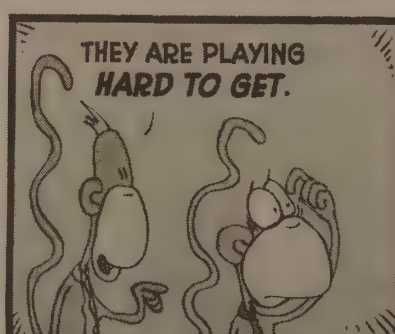

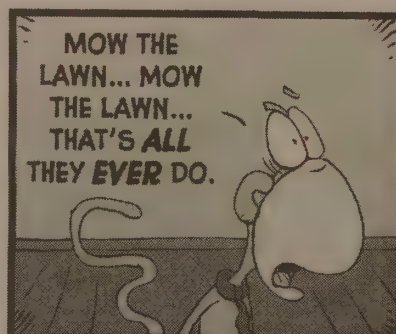

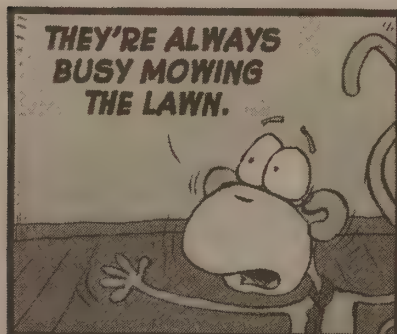

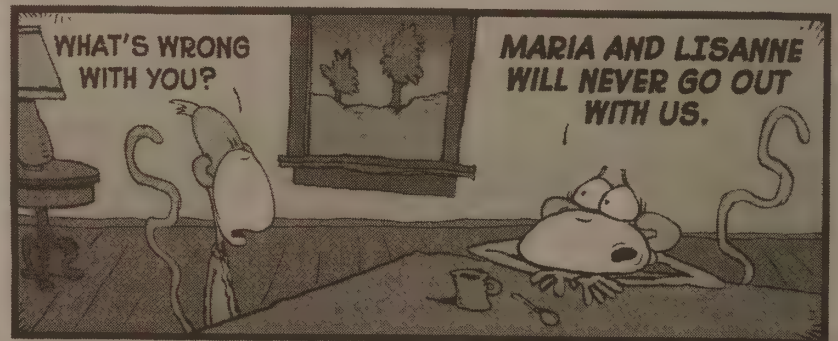

"I take my family down to the lake every winter for three weeks."

"Is Millie still there?" I asked.

"I don't know."

Jorge and I did indeed spend a remarkable 45 minutes together there in my office. We looked at photographs, at postcards, at maps. I had a picture, taken when I was there, of friends in front of a building in Panajachel, which, later, Jorge's uncle purchased and converted into apartments.

Saving a Factory Building in Sag Harbor is Just One Conversation Away

By David Lion Rattiner

Revamp and renew or tear it down and start from scratch? That is the real question that residents and officials in Sag Harbor are asking themselves about the massive Bulova Building located just behind the center of town. The 125-year-old building, which is an historical landmark, has suffered from decades of deterioration, neglect and a general "we have no idea what the heck to do with this giant building" attitude. And so, because it has been standing for so long unused and because only a daring group of engineers are willing to go inside the building due to the fact that it was declared a federal Superfund site for containing toxic contaminants back in the 80s, there has been much talk about demolishing it.

Many in Sag Harbor don't want to see this happen, however. A group known as Save Bulova has emerged with the sole intention of preserving the building and refurbishing it, instead of knocking the whole thing to the ground. The group has circulated a petition to local businesses in Sag Harbor to show officials that there is tremendous support for repairing the building and keeping it intact. One of the leaders of the Save Bulova group is Nicole LaBarbera. She has been going door to door circulating the petition around town and has found that the support for keeping the building is strong. Those signing the petition are sending the message to Mayor Ed Deyermund that they want to preserve this piece of local history.

The Save Bulova group is not demanding that the building be preserved as it is. Instead, they are trying to gather support for refurbishing it so that the same structure remains ing collapsed completely into the parking lot. This caused the village's parking lot to be closed because of the structural integrity issues.

The main reason that nobody could develop anything on the property was the issue of hazardous waste. After all, you can't put in apartment condos in a building that has toxic waste running through it. Last month, it was declared that the environmental problems had been resolved. So now the main focus has become not just cleaning up the property, but what is going to be done with it.

The Village of Sag Harbor hired a structural engineer by the name of Timothy Lynch from a firm known as Robert Silman Associates. This firm specializes in restoring historic buildings. There were problems when Mr. Lynch came onto the scene because Watchcase Associates would not allow him to inspect the building, nor would they even let him go inside. Back in October, the Village drafted a resolution that was passed by the Sag Harbor Village Board. The essence of the document was that the village could order an inspection of the property in the interest of public safety. The document also said that if they found the property to be unsafe, they could tear it to the

and can still be used as commercial property.

The building is owned by a company known as Watchcase Associates and it has its fair share of problems. Over the summer, bricks started falling off the building. Scaffolding was put in place where the bricks were falling so that when they did, the scaffolding would catch the bricks before they hit the ground. Earlier this year, a large portion of the build-right to show the Rangers hockey games. Cablevision owns this team through a subsidiary, but found it in their interest to refuse to show the team's hockey games on its network. Finally, the matter was settled. Cablevision will carry the hockey games for Long Islanders on a new cable channel called OLN.

Still more bad news involves the Radio City Music Hall, which Cablevision also owns. Cablevision demanded that the orchestra at Radio City take a pay cut or take a hike and they would play recorded music for the Radio City Christmas Show. Eventually, a compromise was reached, but apparently James Dolan was so angry about how they got there, he said he would not sign off on the deal unless the Union leaders bought a full page ad in the New York Times in which they would apologize to him. When they refused, the deal fell apart. The Christmas Show is going on with recorded music.

Coupled with this ridiculousness, and along with pay cuts previously demanded and gotten from the Rockettes, which Cablevision owns, the shabby state of Madison Square Garden which Cablevision owns, the lackluster or nonexistent performance of all the New York City sports teams that it also owns — the Knicks, the Rangers and the Liberty — and with their unsportsmanlike objections to the West Side Stadium which subsequently killed the City's Olympic Bid, Cablevision continues to struggle as the single most hated company in New York City, according to one poll.

Almost immediately after this resolution was passed, Mr. Lynch found himself walking around the interior of the building, running tests and calculating whether or not the structure could be saved. He found that it could be, and asserts that more than half of the building can be saved and that the rest of it could be restored and repaired up to safety and code standards. He explained that the building would have to be rebuilt where it fell apart and that the floors and walls of the building would have to be reinforced or reconstructed. He also discovered through rough estimates that it would actually be cheaper to restore the build-

But there has been some good news, too. A marketing plan involving the bundling of three of their services — Cable TV, Internet access and cable telephone — has proved to be a success. At less than $99 a month, it is a great bargain and it has drawn new customers to the company. And to avoid confusion, the marketers of the plan have named it "Optimum Online" since the name "Cablevision" implies only one of the three sorts of service. (Go to your local Cablevision office in Amagansett or Riverhead and you will see banners everywhere with the word Optimum. Their trucks say Optimum. Cablevision is hardly to be seen anywhere.)

Other good news seems to have involved pure luck. Cablevision, after innumerable complaints, announced it would find $300 million to fix up the shabby state of Madison Square Garden when suddenly, across the street, they were invited to build a new Madison Square Garden virtually without cost by the developers of a huge skyscraper there. This would work out very well for them indeed if it goes ahead and it looks like it will.

Another piece of luck involves the development of new technologies that allow for more people to get involved in more local programming. The giant DirecTV is at a disadvantage with showing local programming, and not only does local programming pay to fill the coffers of Cablevision, the result is also more customers. The tide toward DirecTV seems to have been reversed because of this development.

Finally, last week, there was still more good news. The Federal government is considering paying for all the major networks to convert to digital broadcasting to replace the lower quality analog. It has something to do with the Homeland Security Act. For the channels one to 100, Cablevision's programs are still broadcast by analog. They cannot compete for quality with DirecTV's satellite digital programming for the same channels.

On Saturday three weeks ago, the Steven Talkhouse club in Amagansett hosted a new rock group called JD and the Straight Shot. A considerable crowd came to hear them and they were pretty good. The lead performer was 50-year-old James Dolan, the CEO of Cablevision, who says he's always played in a rock band whenever he could.

But three days after that, James drove himself by car to a hospital near his home in Oyster Bay for triple bypass heart surgery. It was successful and he continues to make a good recovery. We wish him the best, and the best of luck in continuing, along with his 80-year-old father, to run this important and unusual company. We hope for a more caring approach to the long-suffering customer base by this monopoly. And just because of the season, we end by wishing that its stock rise for Christmas. Or maybe that its stock not rise for Christmas. Founder, Chairman and Controlling Stockholder Charles Dolan want to take the company private at $33.50 a share. And if the stock goes up too much, the stockholders might not approve of the offer. • ing than to knock it down and rebuild.

Armed with this information, the Mayor has claimed that he is going to support the preservation of the building. But the village doesn't own it, so he doesn't want to go spending tons of tax dollars on a property that isn't owned by the village. A company known as MZ Associates, who has a contract that allows them to buy the building, was probably hoping that he would, as it would add value to their investment. They have not made public any plans that they have for the property.

This has Save Bulova worried. Theoretically, MZ Associates could fulfill their purchasing contract, obtain ownership of the property and knock the sucker down to make way for something entirely new. This is a valid fear for the people of Sag Harbor, considering that other landmarks across America have been destroyed in such a way, seemingly overnight. The only arrow in their quiver is to have the village block the tear down of the building by denying a demolition permit.

It would appear that there is a standoff between the village, MZ Associates and Watchcase Associates because of their financial interests in the building. Watchcase wants MZ to execute their contract to earn money from the property, MZ probably wants the village to spend money on it so they don't have to, and thus increase the value of the property, and the village wants the property to be restored and used for something, but doesn't want to throw money at it. On top of all this, you have the people of Sag Harbor who are most likely willing to hold fundraisers and raise money for the restoration of the property. The real question is, does the money go to the village, MZ Associates or to Watchcase Associates?

There is hope that the issue will be resolved soon. All three parties, along with various consultants and the Department of Environmental Conservation are planning on a meeting to discuss the Bulova building's future on November 21st. With any luck they'll figure out a way to get this thing restored and used so that Sag Harbor can finally enjoy the enormous building. Or they could debate it for another 125 years.

Who's Here

By Harriet Epstein

"We could never get him away from the piano when he was little, and we finally realized that was what he definitely wanted," confided David and Dorothy Roberts. They're the proud parents of the talented, gifted pianist, composer, arranger, Jimmy Roberts. He was about fifteen when they finally came to see that despite his many other interests (which included politics, literature and collecting rare autographed letters of famous, accomplished people in history), music was certainly what he was meant to do.

Jimmy says that even today, it's hard to get him away from the piano. He is the acclaimed composer of the popular musical, I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change which continues to delight people everywhere. The lively show is still going strong after ten years. After all, it's about dating, love and marriage and everything else that follows, and naturally those topics go on forever. As one reviewer wrote, "It has something that every person can connect with, and that is part of its long lasting appeal." Now the longest-running musical revue in New York history, breaking the record set by Smokey Joe's Café, it has also been seen by happy crowds in Chicago, London, Prague and Barcelona.

Jimmy's connections with the Hamptons go back many years. "I was the Master of Ceremonies, pianist and arranger at Guild Hall for a special tribute to Sheldon Harnick, lyricist for Fiddler on the Roof. And earlier, I arranged a special George Gershwin benefit concert at a private home in Amagansett."

Now when Jimmy comes "east" it's to visit his longtime friend and Broadway producer Stewart F. Lane (La Cage Aux Folles and Thoroughly Modern Millie) and his wife, Bonnie Comley, at their warm and inviting East Hampton home. "At their last party, I had the thrill of meeting composer Cy Coleman," Roberts recalled, "whose praise of I Love You, You're Perfect...meant a great deal to me. I was very saddened by his death, not long after that meeting."

The Roberts family lived in Great Neck. Jimmy had a sister and brother who were both "artistic." His sister Jody, a visual artist, married a TV composer, and his brother Mitch, before his untimely death, was a drummer, composer, played piano and guitar. While his parents weren't musical, his mother's father was. He was Sigmund Rome, a well-known cantor and rabbi who presided over a Brooklyn synagogue. Rabbi Rome's wife, also musical, played the organ and piano at weddings regularly.

A graduate of the Manhattan School of Music, Roberts played piano at the Drake Hotel in New York City from 1985 to 1992 and wrote the music for the PBS show, "Theatre Talk". He studied with several famous, accomplished teachers and tells that Peter Nero, one of his idols, moved to Great Neck where his sister soon became friends with Nero's daughter.

One day when Mrs. Nero picked up her daughter from the Roberts home, Jimmy's mom quietly asked Mrs. Nero if she would listen to Jimmy play. "I'm no maven but I think he's very talented," was her response to his playing. And before long it was arranged for Jimmy to have lessons with Constance Keene, a concert pianist, wife of Abram Chasins, the Musical Director of WQXR Radio. So at 16, Jimmy was being driven by Peter Nero (along with Nero's own daughter) to New York City for lessons.

His next teacher was Jorge Bolet, an eminent concert pianist at Indiana University. Jimmy went to Indiana to study with Bolet and when he finished with Bolet, he went back to Manhattan School of Music to complete his studies there.

A magazine article in July 1991 writing about his performing at the Drake Hotel, quoted Jimmy saying that "People think they're capturing the old New York with me." He also claimed in that article that "This is one of the things musicians always think they'll dread.....playing in a hotel. But I enjoy it so much because I care about what I do...the music I play, the words I sing. I pretend it's Carnegie Hall, and it works, for the most part."

That sincere, earnest quality was very apparent to an audience he performed before recently, when he came to North Shore Towers Country Club in Queens, where his parents reside. There before a large completely packed room, he played the piano and sang some of the wonderful old tunes the mature audience know and love so much...the delightful old songs of Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and George Gershwin. What folks at any age wouldn't happily respond to tunes like "I'm Old Fashioned," "Night and Day" and "They Can't Take that Away From Me"? Not only was this group thrilled to hear them, most of them sang the words and swayed to the rhythms. Many there had already seen and enjoyed his show and were eager to see and hear him play.

He later explained that his show songs really require two people singing to each other, demonstrating the relationship themes of the musical. "And my songs are not quite popular standards as yet," he modestly suggested.

In addition to the popular show tunes he played that night, he was particularly pleased when the audience responded well to his playing of a Liszt selection and equally happy when they seemed to enjoy his artistically combining a Bach piece, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," with the Sondheim song "Send In The Clowns."

Jimmy later said he was delighted that preparing for the evening at North Shore Towers helped him connect with his piano playing roots, so that he was now looking forward to performing before audiences again. Writing music is but one of his talents. Performing apparently gives him tremendous pleasure as well. That's clear to anyone watching him.

What's he working on now? He composed a second musical, The Thing About Men, with his I Love You..... collaborator, Joe DiPietro, and the team is now excitedly at work on a musical adaptation of the Henry James novella, The Aspern Papers.

it, and break the hearts of the oceanfront homeowners as they finish up the ice cream sundae now.

Or we can put a line of jetties from the oceanfront at Montauk Point all the way to Far Rockaway.

Environmentalists might argue about this, but I say to them that in twenty years the beach along the ocean on Long Island will be so broad, the combs of the jetties so full, that all of the jetties built will be completely buried in the sand. I might say that even THIS is a temporary fix if global warming continues. It would be a fix for the next 99 years, though. It would be the equivalent of finishing up the ice cream sundae later.

Which at this point is sort of the idea.

It would also be very, very expensive. Indeed, in 1995, this is exactly the fix proposed by the Army Corps of Engineers as they went about lowering the giant corrugated steel panels into Pike's Inlet. The project, which would have protected Long Island from Montauk to Far Rockaway against storms, went out for a cost estimate. And was never heard from again.

It should be revived. There are, maybe 2,000 very wealthy homeowners who live oceanfront on eastern Long Island. I suggest they form a club. And partner with the Army Corps in terms of funding. The problem with the oceanfront hurts all of us. But it especially hurts those who have built there. (As in — the Indians were right). And they should bear the bigger load of fixing it.

So what happens if all the sand sweeps in across the South Fork of Long Island and gets caught up from Montauk to Far Rockaway? Does that create a problem for, say, lower Manhattan?

Uh, maybe. Unless we taper the last three jetties.

Also, the last three jetties just adjacent were shortened, tapered down to release sand. It worked. • cookbook?" So I wrote The Too Hot to Cook Book and he published it. Then an agent approached me and asked for more cookbooks, so I wrote the first edition of Good Cheap Food and it was successful. Then two for Random House," Ungerer said.

In 40 years, Good Cheap Food was published twice and serialized in Ladies Home Journal. With four cookbooks in her wake it is her column that tugs at her. "Before I die, I really want to compile the thousands of food articles I've written into a book called My Cooking," she concluded.

Over Wilfrid Sheed's 50-year writing career, he was nominated three times for the National Book Award for fiction and nominated for an award for his essays from the Book Critics Circle. Schooled at Oxford, he says he owes it all to Jean Stafford, who got him started. "She came to me one day when I was having lunch and casually asked if I'd ever written a novel. I said, only as a hobby. Next, there were two requests from publishers to see it, and A Middle-Class Education was published by Houghton Mifflin."

"As a child I wanted to be a lawyer...then I realized I'd be unemployable to do work that bores me. Thank God I love writing," Sheed confided. He inherited his passion for writing from his parents who both wrote. His father, from Australia, wrote about Catholic theology and his mother, from England, wrote biographies. To honor them Sheed wrote Frank and Maisie: A Memoir With Parents.

"Fiction is for fun. You just turn on the dream machine and take notes. With non-fiction, you can concentrate on the prose. When writing fiction, you don't think about the prose — you follow the sound," he explained.

"It's impossible to make a living at being an author. Most writers do it for love. You can be a famous author and make no money at all. The public gets to read our books for nothing. Other countries pay their writers a percentage when books are taken out of the library — but not here.

"My father encouraged reading. At 12, I discovered I liked poetry like my father, though I kept it to myself. Thank God I had a male presence at home that also read poetry. Not until the age of 14 when I got polio and couldn't go to school did my father ask me to write an essay, on the novel by Thackeray, Vanity Fair. When he read the essay he said, 'you're going to be a writer.' And I'd like it written on my tombstone, he wrote some good sentences," Sheed admitted.

Sheed was diagnosed with tongue cancer, and during treatment, a technician over-radiated him and his jawbone died. He needed a jaw transplant and went through many grueling operations. "I know I must have a hell of a strong heart, since I lasted through a 12-hour surgery. I'm a young man in the morning and an old man at night," he confessed.

His seminal work, which has thus far taken him over ten years, is about the great American songwriters. Having thrown out over 100 pages, the book poses a great many challenges; Sheed feels the subject is overwhelming. "The book wanted to be an encyclopedia. It's almost complete.....I just can't make it go faster. It's like asking the Pacific Ocean in for tea. I feel I've let down the original editor badly, and I'm very sorry about it. It's a memoir of sorts — everything I want to say now. It sounds strange, but that's how I feel about songs," he said.

"After 15 years at the Book-of-the-Month Club as a judge, their verbal promise of tenure was dissolved when Time Warner took over and threw us out, including Mordecai Richler. Since then it has been a scramble, and to have this jackanapes come into our life and take our savings — we may have to leave our beloved East End," Sheed said, with resignation in his tone.

Recently, three books by Sheed were reissued by The Common Reader: Max Jameson, The Morning After and In Love With Daylight. They can be found on their website, www.common-reader.com the planetary system goes out of whack, and if you don't add a second, the atomic system goes out of whack. It becomes a decision. And from that there is no turning back. It is a fork in the road.

The planetary system of calculating time involves doing a very complicated business involving the earth moving about the sun, with a little subcalculation involving the slowing down of the earth on each revolution. Yes, we are slowing down. And yes, there is a way to factor that into what time it is.

The atomic system is based on the vibration of cesium atoms. This was hailed as a major miracle when it was discovered in 1975 that the vibration of cesium conformed to the movement of the earth around the sun. Cesium is available in enough small quantities to create, around the world, about a dozen atomic clocks at strategic locations. Communication satellites tuned to the Atomic

Clocks make it possible for the exact time to be picked up anywhere and everywhere by radio receiver. As you know, there are wristwatches that periodically gather up the atomic signal and instantly correct themselves. You can buy one for as little as $25 and when you get one, you will have the exact split second Atomic clock time.

In a very short order since the discovery of this connection between cesium and the earth's orbit, practically everything you can imagine in the modern world has been connected to Atomic Clock time. These include almost all modern transportation systems, all global positioning devices, all rocketry and television programming, all banking, all security systems and all electricity switching systems. Even G. P. S. runs on Atomic Time.

On the other hand, there is planetary time. What has happened is, that after thirty years of atomic time, it has become necessary for everybody's wrist watches to be adjusted one second slower than atomic time to account for the slowing down of our movement around the sun. Turns out that the news about Cesium 133 is just an unbelievable coincidence. When the discovery was made thirty years ago, it matched. Thirty years before that, it would have been seen as too slow. Now, thirty years later, it is too fast.

The Bush Administration, naturally, is lobbying for atomic time. They don't want the scientists to add or subtract anything. The environmentalists, the astronomers, and people involved in deep-space missions or in any activities that involve the precise times of the rising and setting of the sun, want the correction to be made.

What will happen? Millions of people around the planet with atomic watches are looking at their wrists. The Union of scientists will meet. Time will tell. •

Richie for Halloween. But all looked well with Ripa and family as they strolled down Main Street in Bridgehampton last Sunday.

A Chevy van doesn't seem like the type of car Sean "Diddy" Combs would cruise around in, but slap on a $350,000 price tag and it all makes perfect sense. The media mogul recently had a Chevy Express 3500 van fully customized to serve as his mobile office. The van is equipped with a 32-inch flat screen TV, five other 17-inch TVs, a $15,000 handmade leather couch, a wine "cellar," and a $20,000 laser-cut, monogrammed timber floor. Makes one wonder what his non-mobile office looks like.

The film production of local brothers Ben and Orson Cummings' movie If I Didn't Care keeps getting higher and higher profile. First, they landed local legend Roy Scheider to join the cast, which includes veteran actors Bill Sage, Kidd Sage, and Susie Misner. This past weekend Edie Falco, of "Sopranos" fame, and currently starring in Freedomland with Samuel L. Jackson and Julianne Moore, was spotted amongst the cast and crew at the Atlantic Motel where the movie has set up residence. Guest visits like that tend to get big movie people talking.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTNER

Am I George, Kramer or Seinfeld?

It was Sunday morning and I was having breakfast with my friends Tom and James at Estia in Amagansett. We were all enjoying our bacon and eggs when the three of us started talking about relationships.

"Relationships are impossible," I said. "They start off great but then the longer that you are in it, the harder and more annoying it gets. Once you hit that point, all you try to do is get out of it, only to find yourself in a whirlwind of drama and confusion. Then once you accomplish your goals and get out of a relationship, all you do is spend your energy trying to get back into a relationship. Then the whole cycle just happens all over again. I think that I might be done with relationships. I am going to go against society and refuse to get involved at all. It really isn't worth all the energy."

This caused a huge stir at the table as James and Tom digested what I just said. Tom then looked up with concern and said, "Well, I'm in a relationship right now that I just got in and it is going great. You think I should just cut it off right now before it starts getting annoying?"

"Yeah, I think you should cut it off."

"Cut it off?"

"Cut it off."

It was at this point that I realized that my life is very much like an episode of "Seinfeld." Right now I was being very much like Jerry, and Tom was being very much like George. All I needed was James to act like Kramer. We were missing an Elaine, but there are a lot of episodes where it is just George, Jerry and Kramer sitting at the coffee shop.

"So, you are saying that there is absolutely no point to relationships and that they are a waste of time completely?"

"That is what I'm saying."

"That is a little extreme, don't you think?"

"Yeah, but I'm comfortable with that."

Was I really talking like this? Am I really the Jerry of the group? I don't feel like a Jerry. Jerry is overly confident and is the logical one. I'm usually paranoid about things like George is.

Speaking of which, "Do you ever worry about drinking the water out here?" I said. "Every time I drink a glass of tap water I think I'm giving myself cancer. I was feeling really tired the other day and read online that fatigue is a symptom of cancer. I'm going to go to the doctor and get checked out. Do I look like I have cancer?"

"You look a little pale. But you're half Irish aren't you?"

"I look pale? Oh my God, should I get some sun? No you can't even go into the sun anymore because that gives you cancer. You can't do anything. I don't even know why I bother."

"You're bothering me," Tom said.

James then barked into the conversation, "You know what we should do? We should start an investment company. Tom has his Series Seven license and we are talking about stocks all the time. We could start a small investment company in East Hampton. Or we could invest money specifically for the locals that are out here. The three of us are locals so other locals will let us invest their money. We could call it the East Hampton Local Investment Company. We all do all right trading stocks online, we could make millions man, millions."

James was definitely Kramer.

I was having an identity crisis sitting down at the table. Was I Jerry or was I George? I looked at Tom who is shorter than I am, he has to be George.

I was completely confused when we got the check. James grabbed it immediately and began to meticulously examine everything. He then started calculating what everybody owed and then called the waitress back over because he had a question about the bill. Immediately after that he asked us if he thought that the waitress liked him. Then after that he started to complain about how difficult it is to meet people. Okay, James is George.

I was getting kind of depressed because we didn't have an Elaine. We really need an Elaine to bounce off our theories on women. But our crew is kind of dorky and there are not a lot of Elaines that are out there. Tom's girlfriend could be our Elaine but they have to break up and then become good friends. That would solidify me as George and Tom as Jerry, which kind of sucks for me but hey, I'm willing to accept my place in life. Now all I have to do is break up Tom and his girlfriend and we will be a show.

"Tom, I have to tell you something. This new girl that you are dating is kind of a close talker."

After Jorge left, I went online and Googled the name Rigoberta Menchu and read about her. Following some links, I came upon a very interesting piece of information. In 1972, the year after I left, George W. Bush, then a young man, visited a town in Guatemala not far from the lake.

His father, George H. W. Bush, was at the time the head of the CIA and he would go down to Guatemala and supervise whatever it was he was supervising while staying at a large ranch owned by a Houston-based company called Stratton, not far from the Indian town of Huehuetenango. During one week, our current President, George W. Bush, then in the Air Force, flew down in an Air Force jet. There is no record at all of whatever it was he did while he was down there. But there is one report on the Internet which says he was down there during the time he was absent and reported missing from his post at the Air National Guard office in Alabama where he had been transferred.

Interesting how everything comes around. •

Godzilla vs. Bambi: TRUE STORY

Two weeks ago, somewhere in a cafe in Somalia....

"I KNOW we can pull it off, Jama. David took Goliath, we'll take the cruise ship and be famous! We got two fast boats, AK-47 machine guns, and a grenade launcher.....I got my cousins. We'll be like Rambo. There must be thousands of dollars worth of money and jewelry from the passengers and then we'll sell the ship to the highest bidder."

"Yes, Dido, but people will know she's a stolen ship."

"We will put new decals on the back, fool."

"But she is big, Jama. The Seabourn Spirit is 440 feet long and 63 feet wide. 10,000 tons. Our boats are only 25 feet long..."

"Ah, yes... but we will have the element of surprise!"

Saturday, Nov 5 05:30 a.m. On board the cruise ship.

"Captain, there's two boats approaching us. They're waving machine guns! And they have some kind of a rocket launcher, too!"

"Okay, Jim, order all the passengers into the center of the ship. Give me the bull horn."

The Captain at the railing to the boats below, "Hi there! Good Morning! What are you guys doing?"

"We are pirates! You are surrounded! We are taking over your ship! Stop your ship now and throw down a rope so we can board and take you prisoner!"

"You sure you want a rope? I think we have a nice ladder..."

"This is not a joke, you fool! Our guns and grenade launcher are pointed straight at your ship and we will not hesitate to shoot if our demands aren't met!"

"So you plan to attack and overpower the ship with those weapons? All nine of you? Well, I hope you brought lunch and flashlights."

"What are you talking about, fool? Why do we need lunch and flashlights?"

"Because it's gonna take you all day and all night to attack this ship!"

"Dido! Shoot the grenade at them!"

(Explosion heard as a grenade hits the side of the ship)

"You see, Captain, we are serious. Now surrender and we will not harm the passengers."

"You took out half a room. We got 208 rooms on this ship, how many grenades you got? You know our lifeboats are bigger than the boats you're in...(laughing) Okay, listen, we'll surrender. Let me bring the ship closer so you can take us over. Stay right there. (turning to his First Officer) Okay Joe, take us in closer!"

"STOP! STOP! What are you doing, dog? You're going to ram us!!!"

"We can't steer, the ship's too big... you'd better move!"

"This is your last warning! We are smaller and can fly around you like a bee! We can do 30 knots (about 35 mph)!"

"For how long?"

"WHAT?"

"I said for how long, scooter?"

"What does it matter how long? Throw down your ropes! Prepare to be boarded!"

"We can only do 20 knots (about 24 mph), but we can do it for three weeks...how bout you, boys? Brought enough petrol? You're already more than a hundred miles off shore...how far do you think you can go?"

"Enough of your foolishness! OPEN FIRE!" (Machine guns spray the ship.)

(The captain shouting down through the bull horn) "Uh oh! You chipped our paint! We'd better run for cover! (Turning to his First Officer) Okay, Joe! Open her up full throttle, head for the open sea! Let's see how they do in the big chop..."

"Turn your ship around, dog! We will crisscross in front of your bow!"

"I don't think so, scooter..."

Saturday, Nov 5 06:30 a.m. (Heard over the loud speaker in the Dining Hall.)

"This is your Captain speaking. Our pirates turned back for shore at 06:12 a.m. I understand that congratulations are in order for Mr. Harry Felder of Colorado for winning the pool on the exact time the pirates would head back (Applause in the dining hall). We apologize to the Wrights whose room was ruined by the grenade and we will be offering them a complete new wardrobe from the ship's stores, plus a free cruise. We apologize for any inconvenience anyone suffered as a result of this event and are happy to announce that everything can go on as scheduled. There will be a tour of the grenaded room at 16:00 hours. Thank you."

BETTE MIDLER'S HULAWEEN 2005

Over two million dollars was raised at a star-studded "Hulaween" celebration for the 10th Anniversary of Bette Midler's New York Restoration Project (NYPR) and Bette's 60th birthday. A capacity crowd of over 1000 jammed the Grand Ballroom of The Waldorf Astoria where Sir Elton John performed a 45 minute set attired in a devil costume and elaborate make-up. Sting and Trudy Styler received the "The Wind Beneath My Wings" leadership award presented by Bette Midler. This was an unforgettable evening. Wherever I turned was another familiar face dressed in fabulous costumes: Mariah Carey, Martha Stewart, Glenn Close, Marlo Thomas, John McEnroe, Donna Karan, Star Jones, Eartha Kitt, and on and on. The costumes were lavish and spectacular. Only in New York would you see the likes. Founded by Bette Midler in 1995, NYPR is devoted to restoring, revitalizing, and developing underserved parks, and community gardens as well as other open spaces in NYC. Bette, may you keep making dreams come true.

THE RITA HAYWORTH GALA

For one magical night The Waldorf – Astoria Hotel in NYC was transformed into the famed Stork Club for one of the most highly anticipated and glamorous events, the Alzheimer's Association Rita Hayworth Gala. Dennis Basso and Robert Benmosche, were this year's honorees. The stunning Somers Farkas was this year's gala chair. The "unforgettable" Natalie Cole gave a special performance and everyone danced the night away to the Alex Donner Orchestra. Princess Yasmin Aga Khan established the gala in memory of her mother, Rita Hayworth, who suffered from the disease for many years before her death.

NEW YORK COMEDY FESTIVAL

Kat's Eye
KATLEAN de MONCHY

By the time you see this the New York Comedy Festival will be over and you missed it. The world's best comedy in the world's best town. Six nights several locations funny everywhere. There was a celebration party at the Stone Rose Lounge at the Time Warner Center run by the Queen of Comedy Caroline Hirsch. By the time the doors opened at 10:30pm following the Denis Leary performance, the place was packed. It's funny when there's a comedy performance or professional comedians in the room, every guest tries to be witty, but luckily the real comics bail things out. Congratulations to Caroline and everyone involved in the new big thing for our city. See you next year.

Broadfields Wine Cellars Sold

A Californian Winery Buys A North Fork Vineyard In Southold

By David Lion Rattiner

A winery in Southold that has been for sale for the past year is finally going to be sold. Broadfields Wine Cellars is expected to be bought by a Napa Valley, California winemaker known as Pine Ridge Winery. The owners of the winery in California plan to buy Broadfields Wine Cellars and run it under their own label. The Pine Ridge Winery is owned by a corporation named Leucadia National Corporation which is based in Salt Lake City.

When Broadfields winery went on the market a year ago, industry sources have said it to be valued at $1.7 million. There have been no reports on what the winery has been actually sold for however. It was owned by Robin and Karen Meredith of Southold.

Insiders on the deal have described an additional purchase that Leucadia National Corporation is trying to buy property adjacent to the Broadfields property known as the John Charles Vineyard. The total acreage of the combined property is approximately 35 acres.

The Napa Valley wine is considered an excellent wine amongst most wine enthusiasts. This has wineries on the North Fork excited that such a wine company would be interested in property on the North Fork. The purchase of the vineyard also comes as a relief to the residents of Southold, who feared that the property was going to be turned into McMansions. The Napa Valley wine is expected to add value to the already outstanding wine that the North Fork has to offer.

You couldn't ask for a better sale for the residents of Southold who feared a change from winery to something else. However, it is still unclear how the winery is going to be managed. Reports have shown that local winery Bedell Cellars may be a part of the management of the winery, however there was no comment made by the top management of the company.

Avid wine tasters and winemakers alike will wait anxiously to see what the Californian winemakers can do with North Fork weather and soil. As for now, they are going to enjoy this year's fantastic vintage. Maybe the Californian winemakers will learn a thing or two from winemakers on the North Fork.

A Holiday Celebration For The North Fork

The Opera Of The Hamptons Plans For A Final Holiday Show This Weekend

By Roy Bradbrook

The Opera of the Hamptons season normally ends when summer time finishes but this year, largely due to the successful partnership being built up with the Vail Leavitt Music Hall in Riverhead, they will be returning there on Saturday, November 12th at 7 p.m. to present a "Holiday Celebration." Thanksgiving to the New Year is a time filled with celebrations and the beautiful Vail Leavitt Theater will resound with a wide variety of music to celebrate the diversity of the season. For this concert the artistic director Barbara Giancola and the music director Atarah Hazzan of the Opera of the Hamptons have brought together a number of the stars who have delighted audiences during the past season, including David Katz, now a firm favorite for East End audiences and who sang the lead tenor roles in La Boheme and La Traviata this season. He will be joined by Tammy Hensrud, who thrilled the audience at the Vail Leavitt with her sultry, seductive and fiery Carmen. Hai Ting Allison Chinn performed this year with Opera of the Hamptons in Summer is a Coming In which played in Westhampton and Opera to Broadway at Castello de Borghese Winery in Cutchogue. Hai Ting Chinn recently received a very positive review from The New York Times for her performance in a Bach program at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The reviewer praised her and described her very intriguing mezzo soprano voice as having a "lovely rich creamy sound – like a whipped mousse!" Eddie Peterson has been a regular performer with the company over recent seasons and Judith Barnes who was the stage director for the productions of La Traviata and La Boheme, in this production will get an opportunity to showcase her wonderful voice.

I personally have attended many of these shows and can tell you that I always walk out of the performances with a smile.

While Barbara Giancola is always reluctant to reveal all of the musical treats they plan in the program, she did say that the first half of the program will be a virtual pot-pourri of music, especially selected to delight and enthrall. You can dance to the 'Merry Widow', romance to some of those lovely melodies from the pens of Gilbert and Sullivan, and discover music that you will love to hear again and again, whether it is by Verdi, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Sondheim, Bernstein, Gershwin, Lloyd Webber or Johan Strauss. The second half will focus especially on the holiday season when some of the best loved and some not so well known songs of Thanksgiving, Hanukkah and Christmas will be performed.

This promises to be an evening of true celebration for people of all ages and all musical tastes where joyfulness will generate an atmosphere designed to really get the audience in the mood for the days of festivities ahead. The show will certainly get you in the spirit of the holidays and will allow you to take some time out of the busy holiday season to relax and enjoy a truly unique experience that can only be had to the lucky few that go to see it.

Tickets are $45 before the day and $55 at the door and may be obtained from 631-728-8804

Wine 101: What Wines Will Age Best?

Two weeks ago, we talked about the best ways to store your wine – information that is important for any wine lover to know. But this week we'll uncork some information on how to choose wines that will age the best, if at all.

It is important to keep in mind that not all wine will improve with long-term aging (five or more years). In fact, most of the wine you probably buy is meant to be consumed within a year or two. That's a stylistic choice on the part of winemakers and it only makes sense. The "average" wine consumer isn't all that interested in cellaring wines beyond a few months, so winemakers give them wines that are at their peak, or near it, at release. It is also a misconception that you must age wine. You don't. If a wine tastes good to you today – drink it young and enjoy it.

So if you do want to experiment aging some wine, how do you pick the right wines and how do you decide when to drink them?

Every wine (even every bottle) is different, so there are no hard and fast rules. But there are some general characteristics that you should look for when seeking out cellar-worthy wines.

First and foremost, the wine must be balanced, meaning that no individual trait should overpower any other. If a wine has huge tannins, other elements, such as fruit, should be big as well. The wine will still "age" but it will age badly and probably be less enjoyable than it is now.

For red wines, there are three things to look for: tannin, acidity and fruit. Tannins, which are often felt as a drying sensation on the inside of one's cheeks, are natural organic compounds found in grape skins, seeds and stems. They are the most important element in cellar-worthy reds because they act as preservatives and slow oxidation (wine spoilage). Tannins in some young red wines (like many California Cabernet Sauvignons or fine Bordeaux) can taste bitter, but over time these compounds "fall out" of the wine (as sediment), softening the wine.

Acidity is important because it provides structure and can give even aged wine a liveliness on the palate. And fruit is essential because it's necessary for the wine's flavors to develop and change over time.

In white wines, tannin is much less important, but acidity rules the roost – that's why fine Champagne and racy German Riesling can age so well.

Dessert wines, with their sweetness and acidity, can also age extremely well. Some, including the most famous dessert wines, Sauternes, can improve for decades.

As we said earlier, most of the wines you'll find at wine shops and winery tasting rooms are meant to be opened and enjoyed within a year or two of release, but sprinkled throughout the North and South Forks are a few wines sure to age much longer. Think of them as tight flower buds that will unfurl and open over time.

Some local wines that, depending on vintage, are certainly cellar worthy: Wolffer Estate Vineyards Premier Cru Merlot ($125), Wolffer Estate Vineyards Estate Selection Chardonnay ($27), Paumanok Vineyards Assemblage and Grand Vintage Reds ($35-$40), Pellegrini Vineyards Finale (dessert wine, $26), Bedell Cellars C-Block South Merlot ($30), Raphael First Label Merlot ($35), Lenz Winery Old Vines Merlot ($50) and Roanoke Vineyards 2003 Cabernet Sauvignon ($40).

As you can probably guess by looking at this list, that ten-dollar bottle of cute-label rosé just isn't going to cut it in your cellar. And contrary to popular opinion, bad wine isn't going to become good wine with age. Sadly, bad wine today is, still, bad wine tomorrow.

North Fork Artist of The Week

Photographer, Steve Berger

By R.B. Stuart

As a kid Steve Berger decided broadcasting would be where he would make his fortune, so he gave up photography and later became the CEO of Nationwide Communications in Columbus, Ohio. The day President Clinton addressed the nation, Berger listened over the radio as the President apologized for his affair, and that was the day Berger turned the radio off, never listening to it again. He closed the door on his 40-year career in radio broadcasting, and cast his eye once again to the camera.

Berger was born in Atlantic City during the hey-day of serious entertainment. His father, who was very encouraging to him throughout his life, operated on the fringes of Vaudeville and was an amateur magician. His show business affiliations enabled young Berger to see shows by Sinatra, Dean Martin, Bobby Darin and The Supremes. "I loved it. I used to announce the bands. I liked show business and knew all of the music, so my mind was set on being a DJ," Berger explained. Even though around 14 years old, Berger was an apprentice to a WWII combat photographer, carrying around his equipment, maintaining the darkroom and very rarely.

Berger's father was interested in photography and in the 1960s became excited when 35 mm film came out. He said to his son, "You know we can take pictures inside the house without a flash!"

Still, broadcasting was where Berger thrived. He graduated from Temple University in Philadelphia with a BS in Business and majored in communications. To describe his childhood Berger quoted writer

Laurence Saunders. "I was an only child and I grew up to be an only man," Berger added, "You have to be your own best friend. I alone keep the family memory alive."

Berger moved to Columbus, Ohio where he worked for Nationwide Communications. The insurance company sold the broadcasting company, forcing Berger to retire a year early. He and his wife Ellen would visit their Jamesport home throughout the year, and began renovating the house for early retirement. He started dabbling in photography again and they decided to build a dark room in the house. Five years ago Berger's second wave of photography came back. He began shooting fine art photography and landscapes. "I knew this was something I really wanted to do, although I knew I couldn't make a living at it," Berger conceded.

"I love the idea of capturing a moment in time. I've never been able to draw, so I took pictures. I've never been able to sing or play an instrument, so I played music on the radio," Berger reflected. "When I look at a scene I can previsualize what the print will look like, down to the frame. That's an absolute joy. It's a very solitary and Zen-like experience because it's just you and you're competing against yourself. Other times the picture appears and you have to be there to take it. When I'm out there I'm a happy boy. To quote Ansel Adams, 'Luck befalls the man with the prepared mind," Berger stated.

The challenges of photography are, "The marketing," Berger admits. "With the digital age everyone thinks they're a photographer. Another is, people will pay more for a painting than a photograph."

Berger moved to Jamesport in 1998. "I am inspired by the light.

There is no light like this anywhere East of the Rockies. It's pure and beautiful, because there's no heavy industry here causing pollutants," Berger exclaimed. "The fact that I can go out there every day if I choose, some days for eight hours, some days none."

The work of Ansel Adams, Edward Weston and Annie Lebowitz inspires Berger. What he's truly passionate about is his wife of 15 years, Ellen, his daughter Clare who he describes as one of his best friends, and life in general. "I'm turned on by life and people," Berger shared.

If he could go back in time, "I would have returned to photography sooner. I was always seeing pictures in my head, but never acted on them," Berger concluded.

Berger's 26-piece solo show runs from November 1-30 at the Mattituck Laurel Library in Mattituck. As a permanent resident artist his work can be seen at Cecily's Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck and the Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead and in May 2006 at The Rogers Memorial Library in Southampton. You can view his work on the web at www.stevebergerphotographer.com

The Olde Vine Golf Club Experience

Our Reporter Gets The Scoop On The Large Golf Course In Riverhead

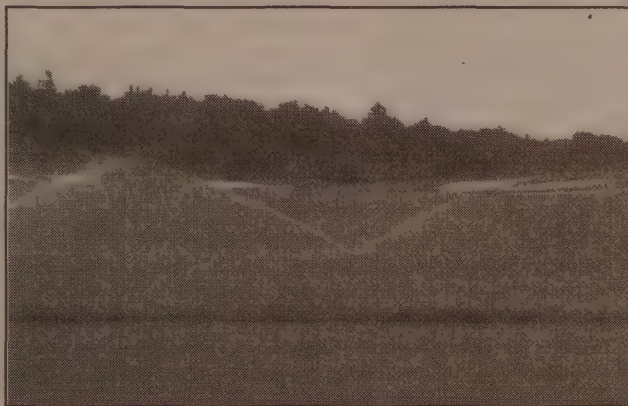

By Roy Bradbrook

Great golf, great food and great wines almost, but not totally, summarize the benefits on offer to members of Long Island's newest private golf course, Olde Vine Golf Club, situated in the heart of the countryside that still exists around Riverhead and the North Fork. Digressing slightly, all of us who live in this beautiful part of the world ought to give a silent vote of thanks every time we drive around the North Fork and see the unspoiled vineyards and wonderful golf courses such as this new creation. Bruce Barnet is the founder of the club and he and Ed Wankel, the principal of Long Island Golf Management, the company responsible for the day to day operation and development of the club, must have been thrilled when the first members played the course and saw the results of so much hard work their team had accomplished on this site that previously had been a sod farm. Today the rolling topography looks almost Scottish and this will intensify when the rough is allowed to grow deep and high next year. Course Superintendent Gregory Dickerson knows the North Fork very well, having been at the North Fork Country Club for over twenty years. He took me for a spin around the course.

The course was a picture as we drove around it. Without bringing in any soil, the existing land was sculpted to provide the undulations on fairways and greens that will enchant and frustrate golfers. Olde Vine may not be among the longest courses but sheer size is not everything. This will prove to be a course to test a player's shot-making capabilities and because there are no trees in common with a links course, it is much more open to the elements than a wooded course and no hole will play the same on consecutive days. This will probably change its character during the day as the wind shifts and changes strength. They have included in the design some artificial water hazards that will come into play on three of the holes and many of the greens are multi tiered and graded to provide run off areas for poorly directed approach shots.

The course was designed by Buddy Johnson who knows Long Island well and has a reputation for creating great golf communities. This was especially important here because Olde Vine is planned to be much more than a great golf course. Around the course, 75 homes are being built and so far all of the house buyers have opted to take membership of the golf club, although that is not mandatory. Some sites are still available and currently prices for the home styles on offer range from $549,000 to $659,000.

The beautifully designed clubhouse blends in with the surroundings and is remarkably spacious, with 11,400 square feet of space on the main floor where the locker rooms, fitness center, bar and restaurant will be situated and another 9,000 square feet downstairs which will house the golf carts and also will provide storage and food preparation areas. As I drove around the course I noticed how perfectly landscaped the grass and the property is. If I were to try and imagine what a perfect golf course would be like, the course at Olde Vine would look very similar. Even though it is still under construction, it was very easy on a beautiful morning to envisage what a charming ambience will exist in the whole building, especially with the views from the bar and restaurant.

This brings in the food aspect. John Ross, one of Long Island's legendary chefs, will be the man in charge of the kitchen when the clubhouse opens during May of next year. With a name like Olde Vine and being in Long Island wine country there had to be a strong link with wine as well as food and Olde Vine Golf Club already has its own special wines that have been produced by Terry Ackerman of Manor Hill Vineyards in Cutchogue. Also, as you drive into the club's grounds you pass by one and a half acres of newly planted vines that will produce grapes in a couple of years time.

There is still room for membership should you want to join. Memberships will not exceed 325 and already over half of these have been taken up. The membership equity fee currently is $42,500 and annual fees are $3750 for a single person and $4950 for family membership. These fees allow members unlimited golf not just here but also at the neighboring Links and Woods courses at Cherry Creek. Indeed for another $500 a year playing privilege at Tall Grass Golf Club is also available. This multi club playing facility is something very unusual and obviously will be very attractive both to those who have time to play many rounds and also to those who like the variety offered by playing very different courses.

Dining in the Hamptons

This is my first experience as a restaurant reviewer. Growing up in a household with three older siblings, I often had to raid the cabinets after the grocery shopping was done and use rapid grabbing techniques at the dinner table in order to survive. To put it simply, I am and always will be a food lover. When asked whether or not I would like to review JT's Place in Hampton Bays, I laughed and replied, yes, without hesitation.

I arrived at JT's Place promptly and hungry at 7 p.m. on Friday night. I had starved myself all day in order to consume my meal with a fresh palate and an empty stomach. As I walked in, the host greeted me with a smile and showed me to my table where my friend, a fellow writer for Dan's Papers, was casually sipping a Guinness, probably his fourth.

The layout of JT's Place creates the tranquil ambiance of a local tavern. On one side stretches a long mahogany bar with multitudes of ales on tap and bottles of liquor on display. Parallel to the bar is a glass corridor that leads into a dining area. The restaurant resembles an upscale Irish pub, offering a menu that exceeds that of any place earning a pub label.

After sitting down at my window-side table, and buttering up and devouring a few warm rolls, I decided to glance over the menu and relax, attempting to avoid the spoiling my entrée by filling up on bread. I ate one more roll, ordered a Bass on tap, and restrained myself while looking over an appealing list of diverse appetizers, specials, and main courses. From the amount of options, I knew JT's Place was more than just a bar.

Typical bar food consists of buffalo wings, mozzarella sticks, potato skins, nachos, burgers, jalapeno poppers, etc. The menu at JT's Place offers an abundance of these finger foods, plus so much more. Soups, fresh fish, pork chops, and various steak options are all offered. I went with the Manhattan clam chowder (as opposed to its northern, bisque-like brother New England clam chowder, which is blasphemy to order if you have any sense of Long Island regionalism) as a prelude to my meal. But what would I order as a main course? I told our amiable waitress I wanted the 12-oz. Gorgonzola sirloin with a side of velvety mashed potatoes. My friend ordered the crab cake and the pot roast. Our waitress commended our choices while bringing us a lifeline of Guinness and

Bass Ale pints.

My soup came out immediately, simmering with the proper proportion of veggies, potatoes, and clams to broth. The flavorful liquid soothed my taste buds and warmed my bones as well as my soul. I slurped it down with some oyster crackers. The crab cake followed shortly and could have been a meal in itself. It was the size of a football and when I tasted it, it released the delicious potency of the lumped crabmeat blended spectacularly with spiced onions, celery, and peppers.

Soon after a busboy picked up my empty soup bowl, the steaming Gorgonzola sirloin appeared before my eyes, just asking to be devoured. I did not waver, and cut right into the juicy, crispy piece of meat. The creamy cheese added a savory accompaniment to the mouth-watering steak. The first taste sent me into an unbridled state of bliss. It made me wish I had a limitless appetite. The dining compatriot across from me let every morsel of the succulent and salty pot roast dissolve in his mouth. It was slow roasted to perfection and melted off the bone.

I gradually ravaged the tender steak, and filled my stomach entirely. My friend informed me that I would have to order dessert to complete my review. I was handed the dessert menu and made a split-second decision: the Snickers cheesecake. The sweet and spongy cake, topped with whipped cream, melted inside my mouth and made me forget that I was no longer hungry. I took time to savor every bite. The cheesecake provided me with an excellent conclusion to a meal of efficient service and overindulgence.

With a sundry, delicious, and classy menu, reasonably priced cuisine, and a casual bar and dining atmosphere, there is no other place to go but JT's.

JT's Place serves dinner 7 days a week and lunch & dinner Saturday and Sunday.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

I couldn't put it more simply; with Thanksgiving just a couple of weeks away it's countdown time and menu plans are no doubt underway. There is the turkey with all the trimmings and all those mouths to feed. It's time to plan ahead and there is more to putting a meal together than a few good recipes. So how do you make it work? Thanksgiving is a holiday of true togetherness, so, I'm certain, when delegating cooking tasks to family members and/or guests they are happy to oblige.

The following soup and dessert recipes can be prepared up to one or two weeks ahead and frozen or refrigerated. While I am not an advocate of freezing, soups and pastry dough freeze beautifully. La soup au potiron, a smooth French-inspired pumpkin soup, made with leek, potatoes and a touch of fresh tarragon, may be frozen a week or more ahead. The soup is traditionally served in a pumpkin. To do this cut off one-quarter of the top of the pumpkin and scoop out all the seeds (a bit of a messy job), then with a large melon baller scoop out the flesh. When ready to serve, defrost the soup, reheat and pour into the pumpkin. Cover with its lid and serve on a silver platter for a dramatic presentation. The soup is prepared with canned pumpkin purée so that's the trade-off.

Pate brisée, a basic pastry crust, literally takes minutes to prepare in a food processor. Students are additionally delighted to know the crust can be made weeks ahead (or even months) and stored in the freezer. One of my favorite fall desserts is a rustic apple tart. Just picture this: the crust is defrosted, rolled out to a large round on a rimless cookie sheet and refrigerated. Meanwhile several crisp local apples are peeled and sliced and arranged in concentric circles over the chilled crust, dabs of butter and a sprinkle of sugar goes over the top and the whole thing is baked then coated with an apricot jam glaze when done. The tart can be refrigerated up to one day before serving.

It's time to get started.

LA SOUPE AU POTIRON

Pumpkin Soup with spicy croutons

Serves 6-8

- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 large onion, thinly sliced
- 3 medium all-purpose potatoes cut into chunks
- 2-3 teaspoons fresh tarragon sprigs
- Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
- 1 1/2 quarts chicken stock, preferably homemade
- 1 can (1 pound) pumpkin purée
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- Spicy croutons* (optional)

1. In a large saucepan, melt butter and oil. When butter foam subsides, sauté onions for a few minutes until tender, stirring occasionally. Put in the potatoes, cover pan tightly and simmer over low heat for about 5 minutes. Shake pan occasionally to redistribute potatoes. Add tarragon, salt and pepper to taste. Add stock and stir to mix. With cover ajar, cook the soup at a brisk simmer for 30 minutes.

2. Allow soup to cool slightly then purée in a blender or food mill until smooth. Return the puréed soup to the rinsed out saucepan and stir in the pumpkin purée. Simmer for 20-30 minutes. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. (Can be prepared the day before and refrigerated, or up to a week before and placed in the freezer.)

3. Add cream, stir to mix and gently reheat before serving. Serve immediately, garnished with croutons.

SPICY CROUTONS*

Makes about 3 cups

- 3 cups 1/4-inch cubes crustless seedless rye bread
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

1. Place bread cubes on a cookie sheet overnight to dry.

2. Heat oil in a large heavy skillet over medium-high heat to 375 degrees. When oil is ready, add bread, in batches and cook until golden brown. Remove with slotted spoon as they are done and transfer to a rack-lined cookie sheet.

3. Mix spices in a bowl. Transfer drained bread cubes to the bowl with the spices and toss to mix. Transfer to a waxed paper lined cookie tin to store.

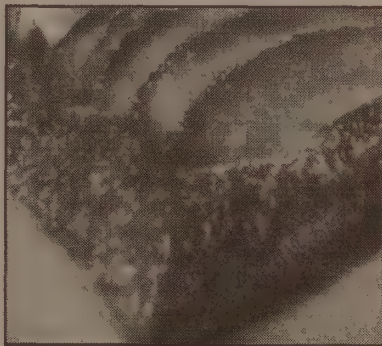

APPLE GALETTE

A galette can refer to a cake or a free form, open-faced tart, rolled into a free form shape rather than molded into a quiche pan or Flan ring.

Serves 8-10

Prepare pate brisée in the food processor (see recipe below). Gather into a ball, wrap in wax paper and chill in the refrigerator for several hours or overnight before rolling out.

5-6 Golden Delicious, Jonagold or Empire apples

- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 3 tablespoons butter cut into small dice
- 5 tablespoons apricot preserves
- 1 tablespoon Calvados or rum
- Whipped cream or vanilla ice cream (optional)

1. On a lightly floured surface, roll out the dough to about 1/8th inch thick. Drape the dough over the rolling pin and transfer it to a large cookie sheet. Prick the bottom of the shell with the tines of a fork and refrigerate until firm, at least 30 minutes or longer.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Meanwhile peel and core the apples and slice thin. Arrange the apples on the dough beginning at the outer edges, approximately 1 inch from the border in concentric circles, overlapping the slices to imitate the petals of a flower.

3. Bring the dough up and fold over the edge of the fruit. Lightly brush pastry edge with water. Sprinkle apples with sugar and dot with butter. Place in preheated oven and bake for 1 hour to 1 hour and 10 minutes, until galette is well browned and crusty.

4. About 5 minutes before galette is done, spoon apricot preserves into a small saucepan and bring up to a simmer. Stir over low heat for a few minutes to dissolve the thick preserve. Stir in the liqueur and return to the edge of a simmer. Cook for a few seconds to burn off the alcohol and remove from heat. Keep warm.

5. When galette is done, slide it onto a large cutting board and spread the thinned apricot preserve over the top. Can be prepared up to several hours ahead or refrigerated overnight, tented with plastic wrap. To serve slice galette into wedges with a pizza cutter and serve warm or at room temperature with a dollop of whipped cream or vanilla ice cream if desired.

1/2 teaspoon sugar

Pinch salt

7 tablespoons cold unsalted butter, sliced

3 tablespoons chilled shortening

6 tablespoons ice water

Food processor fitted with steel knife.

1. Combine flour, sugar and salt in processor's work-bowl, cover and process with 2 quick on/off turns. Remove cover, add butter and shortening, cover and process for 7 seconds until mixture resembles coarse meal.

2. Measure ice water in a liquid measure. With machine running, add water through feed tube in a slow steady stream. When last drop of water is in bowl stop machine. Do not allow the dough to form a ball or pastry will toughen. Pastry should come together when pinched between fingers. If it feels dry, add droplets of water and process for a couple more seconds.

3. Turn dough out onto a lightly floured board and knead two or three times with floured hands, blending the fat with the flour. Gather up the dough with a pastry scraper and form into a ball. Flatten dough slightly to resemble a large hamburger and with a knife cut a crisscross on surface of dough. Wrap in waxed paper and chill in refrigerator for at least 1 hour or longer before rolling out – or wrap securely and freeze.

4. When ready to use pastry roll out according to recipe directions. If dough has been frozen, defrost in the refrigerator overnight.

Dan's Fashion

If the Shoe Fits

Your wedding day comes once in a lifetime. How to get it off on the right foot? Why, by wearing the right footwear! Yes, nothing guarantees the success of a marriage like a stylishly shod bride. For a well-heeled woman is a happy woman – because her feet don't hurt.

Whether you can dance all night in four-inch heels or it's more of a kitten heel that makes you purr, comfort is key on your big day. It all depends on what you're used to. One bride I know wore little white tennis shoes under her big ball gown. Her nuptials took place out west, in the mountainous region of southern Colorado, a place more conducive to hiking boots than pumps. A runaway bride she wasn't, but a smart bride she was. It was either wear practical shoes or end up with mud-soaked satin; she made the sensible choice and danced the night away.

Becky Pepey, manager of The Athlete's Foot in Bridgehampton, can attest to that. She went the sporty route, wearing Chuck Taylor's Converse All-Stars on her wedding day this past June 18. "I just wanted it to be different," she said of the black and gray numbers she donned to trek down the aisle. The ceremony took place at the Checquit Inn on Shelter Island, where she proudly lifted her dress for her guests, to reveal her fabulous footwear. "They all thought it was fun," says Pepey.

Pairing the right shoe and dress involves personal style. "It depends on what the bride wants," remarks Brett Carlin, a manager at Jildor in Southampton. The store carries the more sought-after brands of bridal footwear: Stuart Weitzman, Anne Klein, Christian Lacroix, Kate Spade, and Steven, a line by Steve Madden that is more suitable for weddings with its glamorous and retro feel. They also carry the ever-steadfast Dyeables, shoes designed for weddings and formal occasions made from fabric that can be dyed to match one's dress or outfit. Manager Nicole O'Connell dyes the shoes right on the premises as a courtesy to customers. Open year round, Jildor has three other locations in Cedarhurst, Great Neck, and Woodbury; Carlin says people are buying for ceremonies now. "We had a couple of ladies in here last week who bought Anne Klein shoes, another few who purchased Dyeables for their wedding dresses." They have outfitted everyone from the bride to the flower girl, with shoes ranging from formal to casual.

"Out here, the choice goes any way and every way. If someone is doing a beach wedding, they get Jack Rogers," says Carlin, speaking of the preppy but laid back Navajo sandals that are all the rage for the social set. The woven leather thongs come in every color imaginable, and have a slightly jeweled look that makes them perfect for weddings. "Sometimes a bride will bring in a dress to match the shoes, but more often it's just a swatch of the material," she says. Most in the wedding-know report that June is still probably the most popular month to get hitched, with September running a close second. "Everyone's needs vary," says Carlin, from open toe shoes to pumps to sling backs.

Any blushing bride will state that footwear is a pivotal part of the wedding ensemble. Brides stand for hours: they walk up the aisle, stand under the huppah or on the altar, greet 200+ guests in the receiving line, dance the first dance with their husband, the next with their dad, the next with their grandpa, their neighbor, some guest without a nameby midnight, their dogs can be howling. Betty Rannazzo, manager of the Shoe Inn in East Hampton, knows what podiatric pain the wrong shoes can invoke. The store, known for its wide selection of fashion-forward styles, carries many designers suitable for the day of matrimony. "We can order from anyone; Anne Klein or Stuart Weitzman or Michael Kors, and a specific color, if they want white or champagne or some variation. There are times we've outfitted entire bridal parties," she says. Shoes tend to be one of the last things the bride will buy, usually waiting until after the dress is chosen. "Brides buy closer to the time of the wedding," says Rannazzo. "Our busiest time is February through April." Rannazzo does comment that as far out as fashion can be, women still seek the basics. "They want to keep it simple and don't want to get the dress all caught up in the shoe," she reports. "Dresses tend to be pretty embellished these days. The fabrics they want for their shoes are pretty much the traditional ones, either silk or satin or sometimes lace."

Shoe Inn is located at 36 Main Street, East Hampton (631) 329-4500. Jildor is located at 30 Jobs Lane, Southampton (631) 283-2450 or visit www.jildorshoes.com. The Athlete's Foot is located at 2044 Montauk Highway, Bridgehampton (631) 537-1930.

One shop you need to see is Double Rainbow at the Citarella Plaza on Montauk Highway in Water Mill. Grace is slowly transforming her store into a holiday wonderland, filled with holiday candy and a huge selection of Godiva chocolates, plush toys, greeting cards, and custom-made gift baskets. There are tons of specialty toys: Scalextric slot car sets, Playmobile, Thomas the Train, Lego, Hello Kitty, jigsaw puzzles, and so much more. You can start your holiday gift shopping on the Double Rainbow website by clicking onto www.hampton toys.com. Don't forget the corporate gifts. They will be discounted depending on the size of your order and can be shipped anywhere in the United States. Get clicking!

In the Bridgehampton Commons at Bombay you will find great savings on holiday ornaments at 20-25% off selected merchandise. The shop is packed with holiday gifts, ornaments, and tableware, along with furnishings, lighting and accessories. If you are looking for that special holiday table centerpiece, it's here! And.....there is new merchandise arriving daily along with clearance items.

Don't forget to mark your calendars for Hildreth's Casafina event on November 19, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

at the Southampton and East Hampton locations. They are offering a free gift, yes, I did say free, with a Casafina bakeware purchase. All Casafina will be on sale just in time for your holiday cooking. And while you're there check out their holiday 'sneak peek,' the department is chock full of some of the cutest Santas around. The bath shop has soft and comfy robes, while the nursery is packed to the rafters with a grand selection for the little ones on your list. You will love the holiday outerwear including Santa, Snowman and Reindeer hats and scarves. While you're there, don't pass up the patio department that is stocked with all your fire-place needs and accessories.

At the Polo Country Store on Main Street in East Hampton and Ralph Lauren on Jobs Lane in Southampton, men's women's, children, and baby items are on sale. Look for an up to 40% off on their "Home Private Sale" that will run until November 28.

Just in time for your holiday shopping, at Rumrunner Kids on Main Street in East Hampton, you can check off your holiday gift list because there is an "Everything Must Go" moving sale event going on right now. This is a great little shop with lots of inventory to choose from. For the best buys, get shopping!

Mark, Fore & Strike also on Main Street in East Hampton is having their "Once A Year Sale" on ladies clothing and accessories at from 20% to 60% off. Love this shop!

For a jolt of unique, Needful Things on The Long Wharf in Sag Harbor is showcasing their fall collection 20th century furnishing and accessory designs from Brazil, Europe, and the U.S. just in time for the holiday home sprucing. You will be surprised what you will find here.

On The North Fork: Bedell Cellars, on Main Road in Cutchogue, has the perfect holiday gift for the wine and art lover on your list. You can spoil someone this holiday season with the "Gift of Art and Wine" 2001 limited edition of Merlot Reserve Magnum with the label by noted Long Island contemporary artist Eric Fischl. The label, a soft and graceful watercolor, has been placed on 450 numbered magnums of the wine, perfect for collectors and wine aficionados. The Bedell Cellars magnum (95% Merlot, 3% Cabernet Sauvignon and 2% Cabernet Franc) is selling for $200, which also includes a special gift box that is designed to showcase the label. Go for it! Log onto www.bedell-cellars.com for more information.

Until next week. Ciao and happy fall/holiday shopping.....

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, I would love to know about it. E-mail me at Shoptil@danspapers.com or by fax at: 631-537-6755.

EAST END KID PARTY

EAST END KID
BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM
KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID POST

KIDVILLE HAS A HAUNTING PARTY
My dad and I attended the first annual Kidville Halloween party. Approximately 500 members attended. There was a Z Brothers concert, tote bag decoration station, cookie and cupcake making stations and full out trick or treat. But I spent most of my time in the gym where my friend from school Jordan and I did all the events. Mickey Mouse and Shrek were also on hand to entertain us.

DOUBLES SCARY PARTY FOR KIDS
You cannot call Magic Al scary but he does scare up coins from behind your ears. He was one of the attractions at the 30th Annual Ghosties and Goodies kiddy party at Doubles. That means that some of the moms may have been the kids at the early parties. The party was sold out this year and families wound up on the waiting list. In addition to Magic Al (who I used to call Magic Owl) were Sparkles the Clown, host Wendy Carduner handing out bags of surprises, lots to eat, loads of games and oodles of fun.

When In Manhattan...BY OLIVER PETERSON

Corporate Venue, Rebel Music

CBGB, the infamous punk club on Bowery, may be living out its final days, but the New York music scene remains strong. If you're not going out to see the Stones or U2 in a stadium, and you aren't looking to discover the next big thing via downtown bars and clubs, chances are you'll be visiting one of Manhattan's mid-sized venues. Places like Roseland, Webster Hall, and the Hammerstein Ballroom have been the city's mainstay for enjoying major label acts who can't quite draw Madison Square Garden numbers. In my high school days, most weekends included a trip to Roseland to see bands like Dinosaur Jr., TOOL, or Ned's Atomic Dustbin. The trend has continued into my adult life but, for whatever reason, the spot with the bands I want to watch became the Hammerstein. It was there I danced the night away for the Bauhaus reunion tour, stared in wonder and glee at Jane's Addiction for their Relapse Tour, went backstage to hang with (Jane's Addiction drummer) Stephen Perkin's new band Banyan, was blown away by Marilyn Manson, twice, and caught up with my favorite, Social Distortion, last year. I've grown to love the place. But now there's a new kid on the block, recruiting some of the best, and worst, rock bands alive.

Enter the Nokia Theatre in Times Square. Joining the trend of sponsored tours and sports arenas is a new corporate venue in Manhattan. The 2100-person-capacity concert venue officially opened in September and is appropriately located in the Viacom/MTV building. Luckily, they've already booked a few not-so-MTV acts. Like the Hammerstein before it, the Nokia hosted Social Distortion at the beginning of October, and Bauhaus will take the stage this weekend. For those of you who do enjoy the supposed "punk" music in the MTV realm - representing the "worst" of the living rock bands - Simple Plan played earlier this week. Sorry you missed it, but there are sure to be many more shows with insipid bands just like them in the coming year. The very idea of a group called "Social Distortion" playing at the "Nokia" theatre is wrong too, but they rock, so let 'em make a few bucks. At least Simple Plan was where they belong.

The theatre itself is a nice space but its clean lines and antiseptic look are not surprising as part of the growing Times Square, or as I like to call it, MetroDisney community. The $21 million renovation in the former Loews movie theatre is set to accommodate concerts, live television and web broadcasts, live recordings, award shows and cocktail receptions. AEG LIVE, the live entertainment division of Los Angeles based AEG, anticipates producing more than 150 events each year. Heineken is served and prominently displayed at all the bars, where only their product, with Amstel Light of course, lines the shelves and plasters the walls and coasters. One can't resist asking whether they serve this green-bottled beer while slapping down money and fighting a smirk. If you don't drink, grab a Red Bull. They, too, are well represented.

With that said, it should be noted that the line of sight is good and sound quality is impeccable. Live recordings here will be excellent. The theatre's marquee is an 85 foot long LED, high definition screen, capable of displaying both live and digital video. It's one of the largest on Broadway and is directly connected to the MTV marquee. Live events can be broadcast from the stage in real time. Oh, and dare I forget, it's manufactured by Mitsubishi. Inside the theatre, the Nokia Lounge allows guests and fans to charge their (hopefully Nokia) wireless phones, try out new products and services, and download mobile content like games that are better than Snake, videos, and ring tones.

The Nokia Theatre is a decent venue, but sadly also a promise of America's inevitable corporate future. They've got some great bands in the mix, but I fear that one day, we might blink and see a State of the Union address from the "Haliburton House" or the "Ovaltine Office."

Nokia Theatre Times Square is located at 1515 Broadway at 44th Street. Tickets and schedules are available at www.nokiatheatrenyc.com through Ticketmaster, or by phone at (212) 307-7171.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Trail to Montauk Blocked

Saturday I met with a Boy Scout named Mike and his father Sean. Mike, a member of the Chaminade Hiking Club, lives in North Merrick. He and his family have been walking segments of the Paumanok Path for several years. Mike contacted me because he couldn't find the Paumanok Path between North Sea Road and Great Hill Road in North Sea. He asked if I could help him with a presentation for his Eagle Scout project that would address this issue. I told him that I had made town officials aware of the trails issues in this area and they had promised to help alleviate them. Mike, a bright 15-year-old, pointed out that an important component of his project would be working with these officials.

We met where the trail passes his aunt's house on Spinnaker Way. This new street, which hasn't been added to the local atlases, is located between Noyac Road and Majors Path. The entrance to the trail is well marked on both sides of the road because the trail doesn't cut straight across the road.

Heading east, we entered the trail to find that all the trail markers had been removed. With some difficulty, we were able to discern where the trail blazes had been and found that the path led us through a narrow easement between two houses fronting Old Fish Cove Road. When we came out onto the road, we turned left towards Straight Path and then right up Johnson. Mike asked, "Even after we reblaze the trail, how would a through-hiker know what roads to walk?" He also pointed out that if we asked the right people, perhaps the Community Center parking lot on the corner could be a place for hikers and trail maintainers to park. He didn't think it would be a good idea to park in front of people's homes. From Johnson we cut across the Firemen's Field and then through some cleared lots. Again there was an obvious challenge as to where to put the Paumanok Path white blazes. We then traveled through a small woods buffer into the back of the Highway Department property. Here the trail is periodically flooded and blocked by a trailer and building materials. When we worked our way to North Sea Road, we were confronted with heavy, fast-moving traffic. Mike said, "There should be some hiker crossing signs here!"

On the other side of the road, the trail that runs along a cultivated field is blocked by deer fencing. The best way to reach the segment of trail that is blocked by this fence is through the Nature Conservancy's Marguerite Greef Wildlife Sanctuary at Big Woods. To get there from County Road 39, head north on Magee Street; pass Tuckahoe School on your right; cross over Sebonac Road, continue on North Magee Street until you reach a five-way intersection; turn right onto Millstone Brook Road. After a short distance you will find a small parking area on your left.

The last remaining gap in the Paumanok Path is west of the entrance to Big Woods. Except for the small problem area that I walked with Mike and his father, the Paumanok Path runs east all the way to the Montauk Lighthouse from here. From the parking lot you can follow white rectangular blazes through lovely, undisturbed beech woods. The trail is bumpy with the aggressive roots from these trees. The canopy of leaves is bright yellow now. After a short distance, there is a right turn; a little further along there is a left turn. By the left turn there are some "No Trespassing" signs. Don't let these signs deter you from continuing; if you stay on the marked trail, you are not trespassing. As you continue east, the predominant trees change from beech to oak, hickory, and pine. The hickory leaves are now orange, the oaks and brush layer of blueberry and huckleberry are red. The trail turns toward the tidal marshland with shadbush, maple and pepperbush. At this point, the trail jogs out to give you a spectacular view of Sebonac Creek. The trail crosses over Scott Road, then Millstone Brook Road, where it brings you along the edge of Big Fresh Pond, and across some lovely freshwater wetlands and over a wooden bridge that crosses a brook that feeds Big Fresh Pond. Then you are back in an upland hardwood forest heading for North Sea Road. The fence that crosses town-owned land blocks your access to the trail that continues across North Sea Road, and travels through some of the most ecologically significant land on this island, all the way to Montauk Point.

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website. www.hike-li.org

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

The wan, shop-worn "Shop Around The Corner" tale of the loves of a pretty, young shopgirl continues to beat at hearts with all the fervor of a butterfly's wing flapping in Steve Martin's fine-tuned take, Shopgirl, written by and starring himself, the one-time "wild and crazy guy." Steve Martin's new persona wears the WASPy, wispy Burberry all-weather, all-understated coat worn by all New Yorker writers – including the women.

The casual fragility of his short-story-like novella, Shopgirl (2001), takes on more melancholia and charm as directed by Anand Tucker (Hilary and Jackie). The candlelit performance by Claire Danes as Mirabelle – the Beverly Hills Saks' saleslady of extremely expensive women's gloves paying off a $39,000 student loan, pinching pennies to pay for her dismal Silver Lake apartment. Physically, she is not richly endowed either. She is lonely – missing Vermont and needy as Mr. Martin's voice-over says, "What she needs is someone to recognize her and appreciate her." We are informed of this at the film's start, when she is almost unseen in the glitzy store, as opposed to the flashy, blonde gold-digger she works with – especially as played with such brilliance by Bridgette Wilson-Sampras. However, it will not be long before she is wooed by an unkempt young scrounging doofus, Jeremy, done in shambles by Jason Schwartzman. Not long after being bedded by the bumbling Jeremy she meets the ultra-suave and knowing Ray Porter, the silvery, sophisticated Steve Martin. Ray has been moneyed by the "computer business." He is smooth. He knows about art, fashion and sushi. A real gentleman and perfectly decent, there is, nonetheless, something fishy about him. A bit of a cad?

Idly shopping one day, Ray is drawn to the shopgirl, her warmth and, therefore, the elegant gloves. He buys a pair, has them gift-wrapped and presents them to the young Mirabelle as a gift which includes a dinner invitation. The thirty-year or so difference in their ages is more than made up by his taste, gallantry, long words, and money. He's generous with gifts and schmoozing, but stingy with himself. His emotions are his and most likely to remain so. His time is also jealously guarded. And, he readily admits that she is crazy about him, but he can take her or leave her. She can give him everything she has – herself. He essentially can buy and sell her. The department store's gleaming revolving doors of consumerism turn Mr. Martin's passive love story somewhat sour. The notion of Mirabelle as a commodity being

"bought" by a well-heeled heel raises the cynicism level above that of the scent of fish. Fortunately, Martin's script and Tucker's direction involve, intricately, the sensitive relationship and its expectations. The impulses of the Mirabelle, Ray and Jeremy triangle changes, as do their needs. Jeremy, for instance, is caught up in the competition and provides a fresh, open-air expanse to the tight, little, reeking constraints of Ray's world.

Let it be said of Shopgirl that it doesn't wallow in its smallness. The limits of its banking transactions – the availability of love-made-easy by a drive up ATM machine is opened wide by Ms. Dane's elaborately loveable performance. She radiates far past the Pretty Woman delights. She makes possible the realization of sex and romance as a tender splintery education with high marks or abject failure. In other words, like real life.

Mr. Martin's Ray is a welcome turn of serio-comic low-keyed painfulness. A seducer whose solitary lifestyle rules over what might have been passion. His cold fish, sushi-eating rationales are uncompromisingly self-serving. The raw meat immaturity of Jeremy is challenging and Mr. Schwartzman's satirical self-help efforts enforce the idea that people can change others, perhaps for the better. The well-dressed Ray Porter dismisses his flaws as maybe admirable. Do not scrutinize his failings too closely.

Also, Shopgirl should not be examined with a microscope. Its smallness might be over-whelming.

FOR LOVE OR MONEY

Dan's Papers' "They Made The Movie Here" FREE Film Festival unbuttons a zippy and laughably tender love story Saturday November 12th, and it's a beauty. Manhattan and Southampton have hardly appeared as rich or as gauchely embroiled than as backdrops for the very schmoozy and funny 1993 movie For Love Or Money, as pictured through the cockeyed, comic strip viewpoint and view finders of director Barry Sonnenfeld's Panavision cameras. The movie looks like it was made for love and money and that's not always the case with Hollywood products.

Mr. Sonnenfeld, who made a lot of people and banks happy with Men In Black and Get Shorty, must know and like Manhattan as well as the Hampton neighborhoods where he is frequently one of the boyz. He's the rosy, apple-cheeked one with the really good cigar and he's made a really good movie by toying with the story of an ambitious young man who must choose between love or money.

The script by Mark Rosenthal and Lawrence Konner is openly derivative but slyly clever and has pages of laughs. Though this type of writing can ring a déjà vu bell now and again, the quick Michael J. Fox jumps over the lazy dog-eared plot turns so nimbly you only care about his next leap. He is adept and oh! so winning as the concierge of an elegant New York Hotel, "The Bradbury," realistically portrayed by the Hotel Pierre. As concierge (not a bellhop, merci) he caters to the needs and whims of the guests for what he hopes will be big tips. But Fox's character, Doug Ireland, doesn't stop there. He anticipates their needs and will even play stupid for big gratuities. He also plays Cupid, but not for profit. Doug is a romantic but doesn't have time for a love life, though a Gift Shop saleslady, Andy Hart, has caught his eyes. She is ripely played by Gabrielle Anwar. Doug spends every minute working to save every dollar to build his own hotel. He wheels and deals, takes care of pets, leads and guides tourist guests and, for friends, he will provide hourly rooms for assignments...anything to get his own dream hotel. However, he needs a money partner. Christian Hanover, a devil of a money angel, shows interest. Anthony Higgins makes him the perfect rotter and letch. Christian may bankroll the project if Doug will give him a suite to meet with his mistress, who turns out to be...Andy! And more, Christian expects Doug to "baby-sit" Andy when he besports himself with other women. Poor Dougie! He falls hard for Andy then must decide ... his hotel or her.

Doug's caring table is full. He is protecting the job of the aged bellboy, Milton, a tailor-made role for the great Fyvush Finkel. Milton is being persecuted by a teutonic twit of a manager. Dougie is also nurturing the marriage of a nebbish and bends over backwards for a needy mob-connected garbage collector, all the while being careful of a skulking IRS man who is curious about those tips.

Then there is his drop onto the beach at Southampton. Doug invades a cocktail party on Dune Road in one of those see-through glass houses where the women lob insult stones at each other and the men try to duck the truth about their marital infidelities. Doug had to get Andy out of harm's way.

For Love and Money has both. It is lovingly romantic and looks like a million dollars. It even has a song performed by Bobby Short, the personification of ritzy ardor. Mr. Sonnenfeld supports all this with loads of schtick, brief comedy tid-bits that appear almost imperceptibly and smacking of ethnicity. They kind of slide by with chuckles like commercial breaks on TV, to which they owe a lot, i.e. head-on shots of characters doing facial takes, a parrot commenting, oy, vay! and orthodox Jewish men going after a youth who made fun of their hats.

Barry Sonnenfeld, like Doug, does everything to please and they both wind up making us feel good. Take the music by Bruce Broughton—that pleases, too. Sentimental? It's right out of a can of schmaltz. It burns directly into the heart. But, don't worry, everyone involved with the film has more than enough sparkle and Alka Seltzer fizz to lighten the heaviest heart.

Come on down to our good old town, East Hampton and dive into the Ross School Auditorium on Goodfriend Drive off Route 114. Be there before 2 p.m. for a comfy seat of your choice. After the movie have some very tasty refreshments. Think of For Love Or Money as a pleasant detour off the Information Superhighway. It will be like parking on Lover's Lane. You can hold your sweetie's hand and smooch, or you can chat with Guest Host Marion Wolberg Weiss and your favorite, Sarah Halsey.

Entertainment In Town

review: sweeney todd...by gordin & christiano

A chilling spell is being cast by John Doyle with his daringly imaginative revival of Stephen Sondheim's twisted thriller Sweeney Todd. Mr. Doyle has not only directed, but also designed the radical new production. His stark staging of the classic horror opera about a "demon barber" whose victims are ground into meat pies intensifies the narrative, turning the evening into a thrilling musical adventure.

John Doyle cuts the cast to ten (down from the original 27) and does away with the orchestra. The ensemble plays musical instruments instead and, playing inmates in an insane asylum, act out the story of Sweeney Todd for the other inmates. The effect is an eerily personal journey in which the audience is drawn into the unfolding events from the very first moment.

Doyle's innovative approach dispenses with set changes, placing the action in a black and white arena that suggests a dreary psychiatric ward. The story begins with a terrified young man in a strait-jacket surrounded by people in white robes. As he sings the musical's opening words "Attend the Tale of Sweeney Todd," we are summoned into his disturbing world. There is no turning back. The effect is as if someone has snapped a whip and commanded our attention.

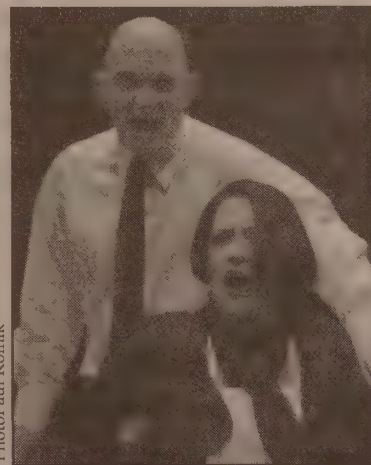

Sweeney Todd is a dark tale of corruption and murder based on the 19th century legend of a vengeful London barber who is driven to a life of crime when a depraved judge sends him to jail, claiming his wife and child in the process. Doyle's Todd is told in a concentrated form that does away with elaborate scenery and costumes, relying instead upon symbolism. Everything is suggestive. Each death is signified with a red lighting effect that consumes the stage, and crimson-red blood is poured from one bucket to another. The major set piece is a black coffin that is elaborately moved about, signifying the changing events.

Michael Cerveris is extraordinary in the leading role. He brings sensuality as well as a menacing presence to the gruesome hero with his shiny, bald head and contemptuous smirk. When he sings, his voice is full of anger and torment. He gives a beautifully realized performance that is unforgettable, delivering two guitar solos in the process.

Patti LuPone as Mrs. Lovett is wonderful and her tuba playing is a sight to behold. She sashays about the stage in a tight black mini skirt and torn fish-net stockings delivering a crude physical performance that is a delight.

Manoel Felciano as Tobias is a standout as well. He possesses a beautiful singing voice that lingers in your mind along with his memorable characterization. Lauren Molina and Benjamin Magnuson are oddly terrific as the anguished lovers, Johanna and Anthony. Alexander Gemignani is right on as the expressionless Beadle.

Michael Cerveris and Patti LuPone.

The ensemble of actors doubling as the orchestra is marvelous. Their precision and intricacy are remarkable, like the workings of a finely crafted Swiss clock. There is more beneath the polished surface than meets the eye.

Sara Travis' re-orchestrations have possibly made the music stronger. She has culled a variety of sounds from the instruments that has rendered Sondheim's sumptuous score even more moving. Shadings may have been lost, but the overall effect is a focus that further engages your imagination while drawing you into the sinister life of the characters.

The first rate lighting by Richard G. Jones enhances the evening immeasurably. However, John Doyle's hauntingly original Sweeney Todd adds up to much more than the sum of its parts. There is an accumulation here that is breathtaking.

Sweeney Todd opened on Broadway at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, 230 West 49th Street on November 3rd, 2005. Tickets are available at the box office or at www.telecharge.com 212-239-6200.

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

There is much good entertainment on the East End this Veterans Day Weekend but let's start with local memorial events. East Hampton's VFW post has a parade down Main St. on November 11 at 10 a.m. starting off from London Jewelers down to the village green. Amagansett's American Legion post holds a memorial service at 11 a.m. November 11, and Southampton has a veterans' parade down Job's Lane at 10:45 a.m. to a service at Veterans Memorial Hall (corner of Pond Lane).

A great variety of music and dance is onstage this weekend. Opera of the Hamptons sings Saturday at Riverhead's Vail-Leavitt Music Hall, Paul Taylor's Taylor 2 Dance Company performs Saturday in Southold, and Canio's Books hosts a jazz concert Saturday. Singer/songwriter Mariann Megna and her band perform songs from her new CD at Guild Hall, East Hampton, tonight and the City Winds Trio joins Darynn Zimmer and Alvin Novak to celebrate the music of Poulenc in Southampton on Sunday afternoon. Hampton Theatre Company has dramatic readings this weekend, and Bay Street Theatre presents olive Dance Theatre on Sunday afternoon.

East Hampton's Guild Hall opens a dual art show this weekend and both artists will speak. The Parrish Art Museum holds a bilingual Family Fiesta Day on Sunday afternoon. There are four film festivals with screenings this week, and an all-day seminar Saturday with distinguished oncologists talking about "Coping with Cancer on the East End" at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. For details on all of the above, read on.

THEATER

Hampton Theatre Company members will give a dramatized reading of A.R. Gurney's Another Antigone. The play pits a New England university professor against a willful student. Performances are Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the Quogue Community Hall. Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for children; for reservations, call 631-653-8955.

MUSIC and DANCE

Sag Harbor singer/songwriter/pianist Mariann Megna, with her backup singers and band, will perform songs from her new CD "Trails" on November 11, 8 p.m., at Guild Hall, East Hampton. Tickets are $20 at the door ($18 for Guild Hall members).

Guitarist Mike Gari and bass player Steve Shaughnessy will give a New Orleans jazz benefit concert at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 6 p.m. There is no admission charge, but donations for Hurricane Katrina victims are suggested. Also in Sag Harbor at 7 p.m., singer/songwriter Caroline Doctorow will perform at photographer Brandon Merkel's debut exhibition at Batiste Gallery, 75 Main Street.

Opera of the Hamptons bids us adieu for the year with a "Holiday Celebration" concert at Vail Leavitt Music Hall, Riverhead, on Saturday at 7 p.m. Many of this year's favorite performers – Tammy Hensrud, David Katz, Judith Barnes, Hai-Ting Chinn, Eddie Peterson – will sing selections from popular operas, operettas and Broadway shows. Tickets are $45 in advance (call 631-728-8804) or $55 at the door.

Dance lovers have two opportunities this weekend. American dance master Paul Taylor's Taylor 2 Company dances at Southold High School on Saturday at 8 p.m. Hallmarks of Taylor's contemporary choreography are athleticism, humor and emotion. Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library is showing the critically-praised documentary Paper Clips (USA, 2004) next Thursday at 3 p.m. (free admission). It is the true story of an American 8th grade Holocaust project which got a worldwide response and produced a miracle.

SPEAKERS

The work of photographer Linda Alpern and the one-of-a-kind jeweled evening bags of Judith Leiber are featured in a joint exhibition opening at Guild Hall, East Hampton, this weekend. Linda Alpern will speak tonight at 6 p.m. and Judith Leiber will discuss her unusual life and work on Saturday at 3 p.m. These talks are free to Guild Hall members and included in the gallery admission fee for guests.

SPECIAL EVENT

"Day of Hope," a seminar about coping with cancer on the East End, is Saturday from 9:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. There are two keynote speakers. Dr. Larry Norton, deputy physician-in-chief of breast cancer programs at Manhattan's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, will speak about "New Frontiers in Clinical Oncology." Dr. Nasser Altorki, director of thoracic (lung) surgery for New York-Presbyterian Healthcare System, will speak about "New Frontiers in Surgical Oncology." A variety of local businesses are sponsoring the program (including this newspaper) so there is no admission charge but registration is necessary; call 631-725-4646. A cocktail party and reception to meet the speakers follows at JXL Bistro, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tickets to the reception, with hors d'oeuvres served and an open bar, are $60; call 631-329-5480 for reservations.

Dave Evans'

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Derailed

Swedish director Mikael Hafstrom turns his attention to America with this tale of infidelity, violence and blackmail. Jennifer Aniston and Clive Owen star as the adulterous executives who are caught canoodling on a train by a sinister and deranged Vincent Cassel. Silly and quite graphic in its way, the "Odd Couple" casting of the leads should generate enough interest in this average thriller.

Get Rich or Die Tryin'

50 Cent may love Bush and hate gays, but for some reason the kids just can't get enough of his wholesome brand of gangster life. Following in the footsteps of Eminem's 8 Mile this is a biopic of 50's brutal childhood, adolescence as a drug dealer, and later rise to fame. The relentlessly cloying

Jim Sheridan (responsible for last year's In America) takes the helm for what is essentially Glitter with guns.

Zathura

Writer-director Jon Favreau is a strange fish. He wrote the script for the indie classic Swingers and also took the helm for the amazingly successful Elf. None of which seems to come close to explaining why this new film has happened. In a story all too reminiscent of Jumanji, two children stumble across a board game, which blasts their house into space. Drivel.

Chicken Little

Disney hurls itself into the world of CGI animation whole-heartedly without Pixar to hold a hand in this fairy-tale adaptation. The casting is smart and savvy with "Scrubs" Zach Braff as Chicken Little, backed by the voices of Amy Sedaris, Patrick Stewart and Wallace Shawn, but the film feels lifeless. If Disney is to reclaim its role as King of Animation, it will need something far more original.

Saw II

Marky Mark Wahlberg's brother Donnie (more famous, of course, for his stint in New Kids on the Block) heads the list of lambs to the slaughter in this gruesome sequel. As with last year's original, the film plays out as a series of psychological games each with a more brutal pay-off than the last, generally involving booby-traps or self-amputation. Saw III is being put together as this is being written.

Legend of Zorro

A black half-face mask can hide a multitude of sins but can it really cover up the fact that this franchise's stars are simply too old for swash-buckling? Seven years have passed since The Mask of Zorro and both Antonio Banderas and Catherine Zeta Jones have seen better days. There is a fun and campy sensibility to the script which is sadly drowned out under the ching-ching of A-listers taking easy cash for little work.

Good Night, and Good Luck

Don't hate George Clooney just because he's beautiful. Of course he was the envy of every man as the unstoppable Dr. Ross in TV's "E.R.," a reputation his film career has managed to maintain. Then there's the celebrity lifestyle, the casino he and friend Brad Pitt have apparently purchased and now this. Clooney has created, hands-down the best modern noir in years. See this, and then cry alone that you will never be him.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

FRANK WIMBERLEY AT FERREGUT TOWER GALLERY

Many good articles have been written about the relationship between Frank Wimberley's paintings and his passion for jazz, most recently and effectively noted by art critic Eric Ernst. There's another relationship that exists in Mr. Wimberley's current show at the Ferregut Tower Gallery, a Southampton landmark that was reopened this spring and brought back to life.

Mr. Wimberley's paintings have been brought back to life as well, figuratively speaking. While he is an established artist with a well-deserved reputation, Mr. Wimberley has not had a one-person show on the East End for a long time. We have missed him and his work.

Yet another connection exerts a fascination between the Tower's space and the art being shown. The building's architecture, looking like a medieval castle on the outside, is a treat in and of itself. So is the experience of climbing the stairway to the top.

While the structure is a strange configuration, it puts us in another world, the large rug on the top floor and the rooftop area with its green decor establishing, simultaneously, a desert setting, as well as an oasis. Simply put, the environment is cloistered, cool and serene.

But, Mr. Wimberley's colors are hot, also recalling the desert, with their glorious orange hues ("Tangerine"). In other pieces, there are forms resembling mounds of sand. Moreover, abstract markings, which look like the scratches in "Voice of the Poppy," recall paths that desert people may have left as they traversed the wilderness.

In another way, they somehow remind us of Pat Steir's ocean waves that were shown several years ago at Guild Hall. The water's ebb and flow resembles the shifting sands found in Mr. Wimberley's "Sagaponack," although the artist clearly did not have desert imagery on his mind.

But we knew that. We just couldn't help associating the desert with Mr. Wimberley's work, primarily because the gallery space created such an ambience.

Of course, there are other images to be found in the artist's paintings as well, including a little girl's face ("Improvisation") complete with pigtails. Are we imagining things? Maybe, but with Mr. Wimberley's work, imagination is essential to the viewing experience.

Mr. Wimberley's exhibit will be on view until Nov. 17th. The gallery is open on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays only.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Bill De NATALE

Just when we think we have Billy De Natale figured out, he goes and surprises us. Just when we think he paints awe-inspiring trees covering the East End, we come across works that seem a little surrealistic, with vintage trucks nestled among those dignified trees.

And just when we think we have Mr. De Natale's art figured out, we find some photographs he did for a New York show, "The Passing Eye," with images that stand opposed to his paintings: idiosyncratic, often ironic figures that are simultaneously beautiful and a bit bizarre.

And forget about Mr. De Natale's subjects being just about the Hamptons; his works also feature arresting domains in Tuscany and Provence.

The common thread uniting Mr. De Natale's works may be his penchant for structure, color and the senses. Regarding structure, he clearly likes to explore architectural detail, an easy activity when one lives in New York as he does. He talks about the Guggenheim Museum and the way "my eye catches the tilt, making me dizzy," and MOMA being "clean and clear."

He quotes Frank Lloyd Wright: "It's not about the art; it's about the building." But Mr. De Natale doesn't end there, naming his favorite neighborhoods with distinctive architectural styles, like Lower Manhattan and SoHo. And he converses about the recent movie, Capote, describing it as "very quiet, slow, very un-Hollywood."

It's clear that Mr. De Natale not only has a "passing eye," but a discerning one as well. Consider this week's cover painting, "The Solitary Truck," a work that reinforces his appreciation for structure and idiosyncrasy. Yet the piece also pays homage to the artist's love of color and the senses. "The tree caught my eye (it's across the street from Sagaponack's General Store) when I saw its red buds," Mr. De Natale says with enthusiasm. "I took a picture of it to show a friend in New Jersey, to show her its uniqueness."

Despite Mr. De Natale's awareness of color (especially red, yellow and blue) and the sensual experience it inspires, he says: "I really don't look for particular subjects to paint. If I do, I never find them. Rather, I paint things that impress me. I can look at mundane things, and it's like looking at them for the first time. Anyway, I don't want my paintings to be 'perfect.' They are representational but they have a bit of theatre in them. They maintain the essence of my first impression." Impressions are important to Mr. De Natale. "You know, I'm only a tourist on this planet. I paint things that impress me."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. De Natale's art can be seen at East Hampton's Giraffes Gallery and New York's Works Gallery where the cover painting is currently on view. (212-534-6077)

Dark Days

Most people brave enough to live this far from the equator are familiar with the melancholy of winter, a condition which plagued Emily Dickinson and T.S. Eliot, as well as 10 million Americans each winter on average. If you find yourself in the dumps this winter, weeping for days on end at re-runs of the Wonder Years, don't worry, you're not alone. Psychologists even have a name for this collective funk: Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), a depression that strikes during the dark season and lifts with the return of spring.

There is a physiological explanation for seasonal mood shift. Daylight triggers the pineal gland, a nut-sized gland which produces mood-boosting serotonin. The lack of this chemical during the winter causes a plunging mood or weakened spirit. This little guy goes haywire, disrupting sleep patterns and hormone levels. In addition, a surge in melatonin common in darker periods causes many to sleep more, yet still feel perpetually exhausted.

While the disorder may affect as many as a third of us to some degree, 20 per cent of cases, known as "winter blues," are manageable, with mild symptoms including occasional bouts of slight depression, lethargy, disturbed sleep, and increased appetite.

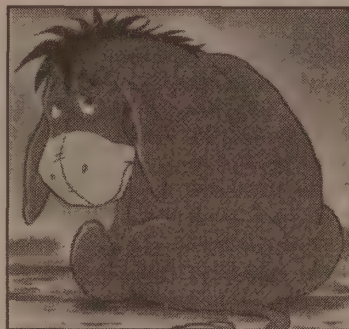

While many find these dark, bone-chilling months a struggle, to those that suffer from extreme cases of SAD, the winter months cause genuine misery, severe depression, and feelings of worthlessness, guilt, despair and apathy. One often feels severed from the living world and will likely retreat from loved ones, sleep all day, cry for unknown reasons and gain weight. Weather sensitive people are like human barometers; without sun, they wilt. SAD is not a psychosomatic or imaginary illness and can be quite debilitating.

Severe cases have been effectively treated with light therapy, in which patients are exposed to an artificial daylight for a short period of time every day, which, combined with exercise and healthy living, has worked miracles on winter-crashers. Light therapy alarm clocks have been particularly successful by simulating a natural dawn.

For the just plain mopey, simple steps can drastically combat depressive states. Regular exercise triggers the release of endorphins and experts say an hour of exercise three times a week can improve your mood drastically. The gloomy weather makes us more inclined to huddle by the radiator and eat our bodyweight in chocolate than to dust off the old leotard or running shoes. So now's the time to make winter plans. Join a water polo league; try kick-boxing; take an African dance class. A little sweat could bolster your spirit as much as any anti-depressant, according to experts.

There's also evidence that a healthy diet could help you feel brighter during winter. Eating foods rich in the amino acid tryptophane, found in oats, fish, turkey, chicken, beans, eggs and cheese, helps produce serotonin. Omega-3 fatty acids do as well, and are found in oily fish and seeds. Vitamin B is vital for good mental health too, so eat plenty of brown rice, green vegetables and whole grains. Avoid consuming lots of sugar and excessive amounts of caffeine and alcohol. For the record, those who sip Brandy to keep warm should forget about grandpa's advice as booze actually causes a drop in body temperature and hinders blood circulation.

Winter depression, unlike other kinds, increases appetites, especially for starchy foods and heavy carbohydrates and we are inclined to gain weight in cold months as our metabolism naturally slows. While a winter layer over the mid-section is normal, those suffering from serious SAD are likely to overeat, which

Dan's HOME

The Dish on Decorating

Sometimes the best ideas for decorating are right under our noses. Or in this case, under our food. That's right, I'm talking about plates. Those ordinary discs that we use several times a day without even thinking can actually be used in a variety of ways to add creative and original touches to the home.

There are several reasons why plates are good choices for decorations. First, creating a large collection does not require a huge amount of money or time. Collecting plates is not like collecting cars or stamps hobbies which generally require great sums of money. Plus, the great thing about plates is that unlike most cars and stamps worth collecting, plates are not rare. Take a look at eBay, and you are sure to find more selection than you could ever need. People are always selling incomplete sets of china, with a piece or two missing due to breakage. This brings me to the second reason why you should take the plates off your table and hang them on your wall. Using plates as decorations creates a second life for your own china that has outlived its matching pieces. Since it is fairly likely that you spent a good deal of time picking out the plates in the first place, it is nice to know that you don't ever have to get rid of a pattern completely. Yet another reason why you may want to take another look at your plates is that what other decoration can serve a useful second purpose, literally? If you ever find yourself short a dish or two, it is easy enough to grab one off the shelf or wall, dust it off and place it on the table without even missing a beat. Plus, as we move closer to the holidays, keep in mind that your plates can be easily changed to match the season.

Now that you realize how great an idea it is to decorate with plates, it is time to start your collection. There are several different approaches you can take when it comes time to choose your pieces. You can either go the route of collecting decorative plates, those plates which were never meant to actually hold food, or you can redefine the plates that did originally sit on the table night after night. Each approach has its own advantages and distinct styles. A collection that consists of real plates is likely to be more eclectic, while decorative plates add a more formal touch to a room. If you are one of those people who enjoy the "thrill of the hunt," you will probably get more satisfaction if you base your collection around real plates, while those of us who want to steadily increase our collections might prefer to choose a company which designs a new plate each year. It doesn't matter which type you choose, just start by picking a few pieces you love.

It would seem that decorating with plates would be a fairly limited technique, but in reality, plates are quite versatile. Perfect for the kitchen and dining room, plates are just as appropriate for the living room, guest room, even bathroom. You can show off your plates by either hanging them on a wall or by keeping them on a shelf. The layout possibilities for wall hangings are seemingly infinite. You can line up several plates vertically, diagonally, or horizontally, perhaps even creating a border around the room. They can also be arranged in a square shape or an arch shape. Arranging plates around a larger piece, such as a serving platter or even a framed picture, also makes for a beautiful display. If the walls feel bare with just a plate or two, try hanging a plate easel or rack on the wall to display your favorite pieces. If you would rather display your plates on a shelf, you will need a few stands. Choose a simple Plexiglas one to keep the focus on the plate, or make the stand itself part of the display by purchasing a fancier wrought iron piece. Lining up a few plates in descending size order makes for a great display, while a solitary plate can make a statement. And of course, don't underestimate the old standby of the china cabinet.

These furniture pieces are ideal for keeping plates on display while keeping them safe and out of children's reach.

When it comes to decorating, plates are a great way to let your creativity show. Inexpensive and versatile, they are an excellent option for those of us who can't quite make up our minds. Plus, they might just come in handy for the unexpected guest. Functional and pretty, what could be better?

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Chores for November

As the season moves toward winter – which starts mid-December on the East End – garden work is far from over. While many of us are enticed by the idea of sitting indoors with a fire, now is one of the best times for preparing for a robust spring.

At this time of year, gardens can begin to look disheveled with an accumulation of sticks, leaves, dead plants, etc. It has been said that a good test of garden design is to see whether or not a garden looks good in November. We have found this comment true, and garden chores performed now are really the start of the spring show.

As remaining leaves fall and plants go dormant for winter, continue to clean them up with some regularity. Remove fallen twigs and branches. A leaf blower used at least once a week to tidy up the look of the garden is of great help. Remember that funguses, insect eggs, and diseases from this year's growing season can be controlled by discarding these items, or by placing them on a compost heap to decompose. Remove and discard mummified fruits and vegetables as these tend to be a magnet for insect eggs and diseases.

As hosta leaves begin to yellow from the change in weather, clip them two inches above soil level and dress them with a coating of composted manure or general purpose fertilizer. Cover the roots with a two-inch layer of mulch or peat for protection. Also, remember that some rodents eat hosta roots. Protect them by pressing some moth balls in and among the roots.

Remove any remaining weeds and their seeds carefully to prevent the unwitting dispersal of seeds. We believe it is best to discard weeds because they spread next year's crop of weeds, even when put into a compost bin. Be especially careful when pulling out weeds that have ripe seed heads, as a shake of one of these can spread dozens of seeds into garden soil.

Because so many of the falling leaves and dying plants provide vital warmth, food, and protective cover for creatures, we suggest that you prepare a "creature corner." In this protected area, stack twigs and branches, and cover these with salt hay and leaves. Over the course of the winter small creatures will take up residence in the pile. This type of "creature hostel" is particularly effective in a woodland setting when positioned near trees or shrubs. As a special note, compost heaps seem to attract over-wintering amphibians and turtles. Be careful when turning compost during winter so as not to disturb these animals.

November is a good time to prune away dead or diseased branches on trees. These tend to reduce the health and vigor of plants, and also look ugly. But wait at least another month before starting winter pruning—especially with those plants that are "bleeders," like dogwoods. Never prune heavily during November, but hold off for major pruning during January.

This is a good time of year to plan for some winter "greenery." Pot amaryllis, paper whites, and other plants on a scheduled basis to force throughout winter. Keep those for late-winter blooming in a cool place to fend off growth as long as possible.

At this time of year, birds move into the garden in large numbers. Some birds arrive from the north looking for warmer winters, others are simply seeking a protective place to over-winter. They are increasing their consumption of food, and now is a good time to supplement natural food by placing seeds, nuts, and dried fruits in bird feeders. Increasing the amount and variety of food at this time of year will attract the largest number of birds. Be sure to provide a supply of water near bird feeders as water supplies dwindle once things begin to freeze.

As fall progresses, don't discard ashes from the fireplace. Save them until early spring when they help to provide potassium and raise the pH level of garden soil. (They also work wonders during icy/snowy winter conditions if a car is stuck!) Adding ashes to the soil will also help to improve the flavor of potatoes and drive away some pests from carrots, radishes, and onions.

While November is a time for winding down on some garden activities, it is an important time for "cranking up" on others. Don't give up on the gardening chores yet! You'll be glad you kept going come spring!

Real Estates

Today's column concerns two entirely unrelated topics – taxes and unique houses.

The subject of taxes comes up because the President's bipartisan commission on tax reform released its report last week, calling for a much more simple tax code while leaving marginal tax rates largely the same. Among the proposals are the elimination of the state tax deduction and the substantial reduction of the mortgage interest deduction. Also eliminated would be the alternative minimum tax (which itself substantially reduces the mortgage interest deduction for many, in any event). What does all this mean for the Hamptons?

Because New York is a high-tax state and New York City has its own income tax, those people who live in the City and can also afford a Hamptons home enjoy a substantial state and city tax deduction from their federal taxes. Moreover, those who do not already hold a mortgage in the City of at least one million dollars can enjoy even more tax savings when they borrow to buy a Hamptons home. The elimination of these deductions without reducing the marginal tax rate would mean that second home buyers will have quite a bit less money to spend, perhaps having a negative effect on the Hamptons market, which is largely discretionary.

On the other hand, most economists believe that a more simple tax code will translate into economic growth, which itself puts more money in people's pockets. Moreover, there will always be fabulously wealthy people who can afford the Hamptons without regard to certain tax deductions. Even so, real estate and mortgage professionals can be counted on to fight the elimination of the mortgage interest deduction. The debate will be an interesting one.

We now move on to unique houses. One of the best parts of being in the real estate business is visiting lots of houses, particularly those that are unusual in some way. With traditional, post-modern architecture being so popular now, it is fun for me to see houses that are able to capture my imagination. While recognizing that taste is subjective, here are three examples of truly unique homes.

I fell in love with the late Robert Lion Gardiner's East Hampton mansion when I saw it last year – so much so that I wrote a lengthy article about it for this paper. Upon entering the East Hampton Main Street property, one is immediately transported to another century. The facade is made of imported Italian stone, there is a receiving room, formal entertaining spaces abound, the staff quarters bring to mind the movie Gosford Park, and the grounds contain separate sitting areas among the enormous trees. The house, which had been listed with Peter Turino of Brown Harris Stevens, sold in August for $8.5 million ($1.4 million less than the asking price) to 127 Main, LLC, which appears to be controlled by New York City's KAR Properties. Hopefully, the buyer will restore the property rather than sub-divide it.

On the modern end of the scale is the "Pin Wheel House" in Water Mill, an extraordinary house designed by Peter Blake and later renovated by Fred Stelle. Originally listed for $4,995,000 and eventually reduced to $3.5 million the house is now in contract for an unspecified amount. Outside, the long house is almost Japanese in its simplicity, while the crisp interior features every amenity imaginable and tremendous glass windows. Tara Newman of Sotheby's and Cee Scott Brown of Allan Schneider have the listing.

Another type of modernism is seen in a Wainscott house modeled after the owner's Fire Island beach house, itself well-known for its parties back in the day. The sleek, white, ultra-contemporary house with its sharp and sophisticated black, white and glass interior design brings to mind a time when fabulous people gathered for the sole purpose of being fabulous, while striking poses captured in New Yorker cartoons. The $1.9 million listing is being handled by Corey Bezman and Cynthia Barrett of Prudential Douglas Elliman.

Another practiced treatment against SAD is herbal remedies. St. John's wort is a clinically effective botanical medicine that can be used as an adjunctive treatment. Those wishing to use it are encouraged to contact a physician who is knowledgeable in the use of botanical medicines.

Imagine it's mid January. You wake up stiff every morning, cringe towards the overcast sky, grope for the shower and curse the weatherman. You're pale, fat, tired and chapped and the only sign of hope occurs when the dark gray sky turns to medium gray outside. You're so desperate that you consider moving to L.A.

Sounds bleak, doesn't it? Don't despair. The sun will return. Until then, taking care of yourself can get you out of this funk. A brief trip to South East Asia, an exhilarating project or some old fashioned romance, even just a walk through Central Park might cure your winter blues.

CAN'T WE ALL JUST GET ALONG?

Dear Dan:

I see by your article on Chabad that you have been sucked in by Rabbi Konikov that his original intention was just to have a few people over for prayers at the house he purchased on Hill Street. I am sure this was never his intent. This tactic of buying a house in a residential area and turning it into a Synagogue is been used by the Hasidic community for years.

It was most prevalent in the 1970s in a town about 125 miles north of here called Spring Valley. The Rabbis would buy a house in a residential area and turn it into a Synagogue or a religious school. In the first years of occupancy they would live there and pay taxes and then would file before the towns ZBA for a variance. Once the variance were approved they were exempt from paying taxes.

I believe that there are more houses of worship and religious schools per capita in the Jewish community in Spring Valley than anywhere else in the United States. It is my contention that if Rabbi Konikov wanted to establish a Synagogue in Southampton he should have purchased property for that requirement. The fact that there is not adequate parking for a Synagogue is a hurdle that he is trying to overcome by using Hill Street to park. Using the parishioners of the Catholic Church as an attempt to show that parking on Hill Street is accepted is a false attempt. I am sure the reason why parishioners park on Hill Street is because the parking lot is full and the congregation has grown over the years.

I sure hope that the Southampton Town ZBA turns down the variance for the Synagogue at this location. The next thing that will happen is if adjoining property becomes available, I am sure the Synagogue would purchase it and attempt to erect a religious school. This is a typical move by the Hasidic community. Rabbi Konikov should purchase property zoned for one and not try to circumvent zoning laws. There is a need for a Synagogue in Southampton.

GET OUT THE VOTE

Dear Dan,

I have read three or four of your commentaries, and I simply adore your investigation on the scene story on November 4, 2005. It pays to have a personal account on an event. Good job, and good reporting! I can't imagine Florida without Publix.

The Presidential Library must have lots of space for all those notes, but, in my opinion, we won't have to worry about future notes, because writing will become obsolete, since we all use computers. I agree, however, with you that some day it will all crash, and we'll have nothing, no notes to treasure.

I feel the same about our leader and I just can't justify why he's still there.

CLEAN THE SLATE

Dear Dan,

With the indictment of Scooter Libby and the ongoing investigation of Karl Rove, we now have a big fat lie on our hands in this country that we can only hope garners as much attention as Clinton's famous lie about who he had sex with. This lie has cost our country over 2000 lives, our reputation in the world community and put us in more danger than we were before 9/11. Not to mention the billions of dollars that have been spent propagating the lie that Iraq was ever a threat to America. It's time we all wake up and demand the truth. It's time for the people whose lies affect our lives and our country to be held accountable. It's time to clean up the White House. No matter how dirty you thought Clinton's White House was this one is downright filthy.

HEADED WHERE?

Dear Dan,

I'm afraid most pilots of my acquaintance would take issue with your October 28 article "Plane Crash." He was not trying to land on Mill Hill Lane. If you refer to a map of East Hampton you'll note that the road lines up almost perfectly with runway 28 of East Hampton Airport and that's what he was trying to reach. We know this because he lowered the plane's landing gear, which one doesn't do if he expects to land on any kind of rough terrain, much less trees. The article also states "the engine cut out entirely." Since the aircraft was a twin it is not clear what this means. If the pilot lost both engines (a rare occurrence), he probably never had a chance. If he lost only one he might have made it if he was very proficient in that type aircraft.

I do hope the article was correct in stating that he was "killed instantly on impact."

Jack McCollum

Until the last moment, he was circling. He may have been trying for the airport but that was 2 miles away. We'll never know. -DR

Police Blotter

Trust Bust

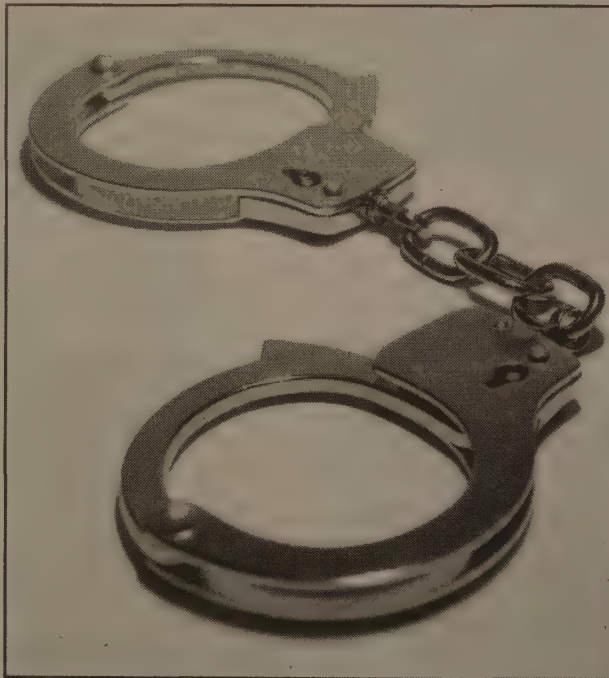

Stories like this make you think twice about whose hands you place your trust, or in this case, your debit card into. A retired couple from Sag Harbor recently discovered $60,000 missing from their bank account. They believe the money was taken by a former caretaker who had been lent the debit card in order to purchase groceries over a period of several months. The suspect had been caring for the couple since 2004 and it is probable that he was deceptively siphoning off the money for quite a while. Police had no further information on this matter since it is still under investigation. It is certain that the deviant caretaker did not spend 60 grand on eggs, milk, and OJ from King Kullen. It is possible to spend that much at Citarella, though.

Get Out of Your Dreams, and Off the Road

A 46-year-old Montauk man was charged with a DWI last Saturday. There was no elaborate chase, or any camera footage worthy of appearing on "World's Wildest Police Videos." The man was simply found fast asleep behind the wheel of his pickup truck while parked smack in the middle of Abraham's Path in Amagansett. The front of the vehicle was damaged, although police were unable to determine what it had struck. What was ridiculous about this story, besides everything, was that the man was too intoxicated to perform a sobriety test. It is, therefore, uncertain whether he passed or failed the test. Please, for the love of all that is good in this world, get this man off the road.

Cinemaniac

Police were called to East Hampton Cinema last Saturday evening for a berserk line-cutter. This wild woman attempted to cut the line to the theater, only to be stopped by an employee seeking to enforce the equal opportunity laws of which all moviegoers abide. The cunning employee stood in front of the immoral line-cutter, virtually risking his life. The theater cheater threw the employee out of the way and roared "I bought my ticket early today and I should be let in first." Surprisingly, the crazy culprit was not a 4-year-old girl, but an adult! It is uncertain if the police arrested the movie-going maniac, but I'm sure she received a brisk scolding and was told to have quiet time in the corner. Grow up.

* * *

One to Grow on

Two employees at Damark's Deli on Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton called police on October 24 when a former employee, who had been fired, threatened them. He had not threatened them with violence or physical harm, but instead with horticulture. The suspect apparently told them he would plant marijuana in the cars of the two men or on the men themselves. I think this is ridiculous because you need soil, water, and sunlight to plant anything that grows. Unless these men had botanical gardens in their center consoles or in their pockets, there was no way this disgruntled employee would get away with planting the marijuana.

Sword Scares Sister

Police in Southampton arrested a 16-year-old boy on October 27. He had allegedly threatened his sister with a sword, and was taken into custody for menacing in the second degree. I think his sister misunderstood his premature Halloween costume, as a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle, and called police out of terror.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

Simply call 1-877-794-5363 to request this informative free report.

BROWN HARRIS STEVENS Established 1873

AMAGANSETT/FURTHER LANE VICINITY

Historic 3.5 acre property was the Namaganessett Tennis Club in the late nineteenth century. The wainscoted clubhouse is a large "bungalow" with dormers and porches. Completely renovated in 2000 with large living room, dining room and country kitchen. Six bedrooms, seven and one-half baths including master suite with his/hers baths, closets and offices. Finished basement with staff bedroom and bath plus billiards room, playroom, wine closet and full bath. Separate legal guest house with kitchen and full bathroom, garage/studio building. Already subdivided into three lots, there is room to build another dwelling and a tennis court. The grounds are magnificent with expansive lawns, gardens and a secluded swimming pool. Only three tenths of a mile to the ocean beach, this location is ideal for anyone wanting a manicured estate near the beach. Offered co-exclusively, $15,750,000. Web #40178. Peter M. Turino, 631-903-6115.
